STUDENT MOBS BATTLE POLICE IN RIOT OVER PITT-TECH GAME

Today

Lasker and Macaulay.
Another Hawks Record.
Let Wets Not Hope Too Much.
Idle Dollars, Idle Men.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

ALBERT D. LASKER, now too rich to care about more money, devotes himself to spreading useful thought, including "Macaulay's Essay on Southey's Colloquies on Society."

What Macaulay had to say just one hundred years ago in the Edinburgh Review, ought to be read by every Gloomy American and Briton as well.

IN EIGHTEEN THIRTY, after the Napoleonic wars, Europe was prostrate with disaster and debt. But the debt that then seemed unpayable, multiplied by ten, would be only a joke today.

It is true that the battle of Waterloo was followed by the introduction of steam power, with its undreamed of industry and riches.

But, if the world of 1830 had steam, this age has electricity, mass production, and high wages, making possible mass consumption.

Let any business man in the dumps write to Albert D. Lasker, Chicago, Illinois, and ask him for a copy of that Macaulay essay.

CAPT. HAWKS, America's champion flier, goes on establishing records while others talk.

He has just flown from New York to Havana in 9 hours 21 minutes, including stops of 23 minutes at Jacksonville and 20 minutes at Miami. This trip means leaving New York after breakfast and getting to Havana in time for a swim before dinner. Hawks' flight average, 182 miles an hour, cut the record from 14 hours to 9 hours 21 minutes.

He hopes to lower that on the return journey.

THOSE WHO believe that the recent vote against prohibition means the change in the Volstead law should bear in mind the fact that the House of Representatives now holds about 133 wets against 302 drys.

What 133 can do against 302 is all that the late election will do against prohibition.

HOWEVER, IF three or four of the biggest states in the Union are really determined not to have prohibition, they won't have it. But the best that they can hope for, probably, is bootleg liquor based on ignoring the law.

SINCE THE slump began, savings bank deposits have increased many hundreds of millions.

Thrift, when wise, is admirable. When it represents only vague fear it is harmful and destructive.

Idle DOLLARS mean idle MEN.

He who will not buy somebody else's goods, if he has the money, will find somebody else unwilling to buy his services.

The employer content to talk platitudes while laying off men is cutting his own throat financially and will realize it.

"TO CONVINCE others be yourself convinced." Billy Sunday coming back to wicked New York City for one day, is as convincing as he ever was. The temple where he battled with the devil and "King Booze, the most awful scourge of America," was crowded and many more turned away.

BILLY SUNDAY'S devil is a real one, with hoofs made of horn, a real spear, and a genuine hell with fire and brimstone.

It is refreshing to see and hear somebody who really believes something.

AT THE COLUMBIA University Club a gentleman who lives in New York's Park avenue, right where the rents are highest, asks the President "to urge canceling all of the war debts." He wants somebody to take the lead in that

That has already been done by several European nations. If canceling debts as the gentleman suggests, would "spur prosperity's return," prosperity ought to be coming back now, on the run.

WHY NOT SUGGEST canceling the debts and sending over ten billions more, just to make sure of prosperity?

Or would it be a better idea to take the money, if we can get it, since they owe it to us, and use it to employ American labor?

JOHNS HOPKINS Medical School renders great public service in the study of the "common cold."

It is found to be due to a germ or "virus" so small that the microscope cannot detect it, and no filter will stop its passage. It has been impossible thus far to manufacture a serum to develop immunity in human beings. Such a serum would be next in value to smallpox vaccination. The "common cold," usually neglected, lays the foundation for diseases that cause death.

East End Man Held for West Virginia Police in Camp Mystery Slaying Hunt

Surrounding a house at 6412 Winslow street, East End, city detectives and police early today arrested Louis A. Zambrano, 29, who they say they believe is implicated in the murder of an unidentified man at Pine Creek near New Martinsville, W. Va. The victim, shot to death, is believed to be a Pittsburgher, members of the homicide squad of detectives say.

ARMED WHEN ARRESTED

West Virginia authorities yesterday asked local detectives to arrest an automobile bearing certain license plates. Investigation revealed the plates had been issued to Zambrano. The man, detectives say, came to the door with a revolver in his hand, but did not offer resistance.

At detective headquarters Zambrano, police say, admitted he and two other men had rented a camp Monday on Pine Creek, near New Martinsville. They remained at the camp only one day. Zambrano came home and the others separated, one going to Cleveland and the other to Clarksburg, W.

CLAIRTON COKE FIRM SUED

A $3,500,000 suit for damages filed today against the Clairton By-Products Coke Company charges that gases burned in the open which could be exhausted into gas mains and used commercially, are endangering the life and property of property owners adjacent to the by-products plant.

The suit was filed in behalf of 38 owners of 584 acres of land near the plant located at the head of Peters Creek. It also charges that the company is in a conspiracy with "other divers companies" to maintain the 60 cents a thousand consumer rate for illuminating gas.

Enough gas is manufactured in the by-product manufacture of coke, the bill of complaint alleges, to supply New York, Boston and Chicago, but instead of purifying the gas the company calls it "sulphur gas" and burns it in the open.

Daily 1,000 tons of sulphur dioxide, 17½ tons of carbon monoxide, arsenious gas "and other posionous ingredients," the bill alleges, are wafted over the countryside endangering human, animal and vegetable life. Attorney Joseph L. Pinkasiewisz filed the suit.

WALSH'S SON, CUT, BETTER

Paul Walsh, 28, son of Police Superintendent Peter P. Walsh, is recovering, and is expected to leave Mercy Hospital within a few days, it was said today. He was taken there suffering stab wounds in the face and neck.

Walsh, a patrol box inspector, was injured when he, police say, attempted to stop a fight among Negroes at Wylie avenue and Fernando street yesterday.

Charles Shean, of 927 Webster avenue, who was involved in the distribuance was severely bitten on the index finger by one of the other participants.

Those being held pending Walsh's recovery are Zion McKeinze, 35, of 1409 Colwell street, his wife, Catherine, 34 and Inez Stewart, 28, of 623 Duff street.

Dancer Sues Adele Ryan For Half Million

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—(AP.)—Adele Ryan, granddaughter of the late Thomas Fortune Ryan and heir to part of his $125,000,000 fortune, has been notified through her attorney, of a suit for half a million dollars in damage prepared by Muriel Johnson, night club dancer.

Miss Ryan is not in New York, but Nathan Burkan, her counsel, called the suit 'a damage action of some sort or other."

Muriel Johnson began a divorce action two months ago against her husband and dancing partner, Bob Johnson with whom she had won popularity in New York's Greenwich Village and European cities.

Miss Johnson's attorney would not discuss the nature of the court action against the Ryan heiress today, and Miss Johnson said:

"I'm sorry, but I can't talk about it now."

In 1923 Adele Ryan figured in an automobile accident in which Lewis G. Norrie, Princeton polo star, was killed and Miss Ryan badly hurt. Names of another couple, believed to have been in the car when it crashed at Asbury Park, N. J., were not learned.

JERITZA SUES OVER BOOK

VIENNA, Nov. 8.—(AP.)—Maria Jeritza objects to being depicted in a book named "Riff-Raff."

She has filed charges of defamation of character against Dr. Muller Guttenbrunn, Austrian writer, because of alleged picturization of her and her husband, Baron von Popper, in his book of that title.

TRAIN ROBBERS EVADE CAPTURE

OAKLAND, Cal., Nov. 8.—(AP.)—The thorough methods of the outlaws who robbed a Southern Pacific local train of $55,700 at Nobel, Cal., yesterday, left authorities little in the way of clues today.

Search centered in the hills east of San Francisco Bay, where it was believed the band of five to seven may have a hideout, and in the known rendezvous of underworld characters in the bay cities.

The dispatch with which the robbers worked indicated that they were familiar with the transportation of valuable registered mail and the shipments which the train carried when it left Oakland at 7 o'clock yesterday morning on its daily run to Tracy, Cal.

MILK BOTTLES BOMBARD OFFICERS; GRID RIVALS CLASH FOR CITY TITLE

Panthers, Plaid In 17th Meeting

By JESS CARVER

One football game, won or lost, does not make or break a season. The loss of two, or the tieing of one that should have been recorded on the winning side of the ledger, does not necessarily mean that the entire cause is lost, provided satisfactory recompense is made by the crushing of an old foe.

Pitt and Carnegie Tech, clashing today for the seventeenth time, with their respective records more or less blotched for the season, hope to retrieve some of the glory that should have been with a last ditch battle in the Stadium this afternoon. Always torrid rivals, the two local institutions, player for player and student for student, will be at each other's throats today, and are expected to furnish thrill after thrill for a crowd that promises to go better than 50,000.

The advance sale of seats for this consolation match between two of Notre Dame's principal victims, one also beaten by New York University and the other tied by Nebraska, indicates that with fair weather boosting the sale at the Stadium ticket booths today, the attendance will pass half the 100,000 mark.

OUTCOME TOSS-UP

The game appears to be an absolute toss-up. Tech has the potential power to make it a favorite, but things have not gone well at Carnegie this year and supporters of the Plaid, rabid or otherwise, are extremely backward when it comes to quoting or offering any odds.

Pitt, which started out to surprise even its most ardent follow-

Students Jailed, Later Released

Carnegie Tech students, taking a cue from their rivals at Pitt, staged a pre-game celebration in Woodlawn avenue early today, caused two riot calls, burned two old automobiles, showered police and firemen with milk bottles and poured hot water on them from dormitory windows.

STUDENTS FREED

When the dust of battle cleared away, 39 Tech students were under arrest, a patrolman was treated in Homeopathic Hospital for a lacerated hand, and a lieutenant was nursing a lump on his head where a bottle struck him.

All the students arrested were discharged by Magistrate J. J. O'Connor in the Oakland police court this morning, at the instance of Inspector James N. Hoey, when police and firemen were unable to identify the defendants as having participated in the disorder. The magistrate warned them against further disturbances.

BALK FIRE FIGHTERS

Not to be outdone by University of Pittsburgh students' demonstration downtown yesterday, when 37 Pitt students were arrested, the Tech students hauled an ancient automobile before the dormitories in Woodlawn avenue and set it afire to open the celebration in anticipation of today's Pitt-Tech football game.

Firemen responding to a still alarm found the entrance to Woodlawn avenue at Forbes street barricaded with park benches. As they removed the obstruction they were met by the barrage of bottles, stones and bricks.

SECOND AUTO SET AFIRE

The firemen extinguished the flames after 50 feet of asphalt in Woodlawn avenue buckeled from the intense heat.

An hour later another automobile was set afire. Fifty police of the Oakland station, under Lieut. Harry J. Payne, charged the students while firemen fought the blaze.

The students repeated their milk bottle assault. Payne was struck on the head. Patrolman Regis Ruffner was sent to the hospital with a badly-cut hand.

PRISONERS LISTED

DRY QUIZ HEARS PENNINGTON

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—(INS.)—Dissention over the dry issue continues unabated within the Wickersham Crime Commission, confronted with the problem of agreeing on a report to the December Congress.

If Chairman Wickersham's express intention, to have a report on the prohibition question ready by that time, is to be realized, many hurdles must be negotiated.

Wickersham declared today that "eleven minds" are still wrestling with the problem. There are 11 members of the commission.

2ND CARDINAL DIES IN 2 DAYS

FLORENCE, Italy, Nov. 8.—(AP.)—Cardinal Alfonso Maria Mistrangelo, Archbishop of Florence, died last night of gastric poisoning. He was 78 years old.

Cardinal Mistrangelo underwent an operation earlier in the day.

Ecclesiastical circles said tonight that the Mistrangelo death and that of Cardinal Charost at Rennes, France, today makes a consistory in December increasingly certain, as there are 11 vacancies.

STORMS HALT DO-X FLIGHT

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 8.—(INS.)—Stormy weather over the English Channel today forced postponement of the flight of the giant German flying boat DO-X to Calshot, Southampton, England.

Forty persons, including passengers and crew, had gathered at the landing stage in the hope of making the flight, and there was keen disappointment when receipt of unfavorable weather reports made the take-off impossible. The start will be made as soon as the weather clears.

DEMOCRATS PLEDGE CO-OPERATIVE CONGRESS TO HOOVER

SMITH, COX, DAVIS JOIN ON POLICY

Unique Political Statement Promises Un-obstructive Session for President

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—(AP.)—Into the confused congressional situation brought about by the near deadlock of election results, seven Democratic leaders today had thrown a pledge of non-obstruction.

The executive heads of the party and three former Democratic presidential nominees last night issued a statement claiming dominance of the legislative branch of government but asserting the party would place the welfare of the country and the restoration of prosperity ahead of political advantage and the desire to show power.

G. O. P. SLENDER LEAD

Ignoring the latest compilation of results which gave the Republicans the narrowest of majorities in both Senate and House, they said the Democrats, to the extent of their ability, would steer legislation in the next Congress. They declared:

"The Seventy-second Congress will not be an obstructive body. It will not seek to embarrass the President of the United States, but will be glad to co-operate with him and with members of the opposite party in the House and Senate in every measure that conduces to the welfare of the country.

"There will be no holding up of necessary appropriations, no rejection of fit appointees to important places merely because these appointments are made by a president of the opposite party."

HOOVER EXPRESSION

Their statement came on the heels of the only expression President Hoover has permitted himself in regard to the election. It was a single sentence:

"The job for the country now is to concentrate on measures of co-operation for economic recovery."

The Democratic pledge bore the signatures of James M. Cox, John W. Davis and Alfred E. Smith, the last three presidential candidates of the party; Senator Joe T. Robinson and Representative John N. Garner, the party leader in Congress, and John J. Raskob and Jouett Shouse, the executive heads of the Democratic National Committee.

BALANCE TODAY

The Senate—Republicans, 48; Democrats, 47; Farmer-Labor, 1.

Recounts are being demanded on a number of close results on which the Republican House majority rests. The Republicans also may seek to take away some seats gone Democratic by a handful of votes. Even the senate result still is under the shadow of a possible recount demand in Minnesota, where Senator Schall was re-elected over strong Democratic opposition.

Talkie Sale Balked, Says De Forest Suit

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—(AP.)—Dr. Lee De Forest, inventor of radio and talking motion picture devices, filed a $2,770,000 damage suit in the Supreme Court yesterday against the Western Electric Company, Inc., the Electrical Research Products, Inc., and John E. Otterson, president of Electrical Research Products.

He charged the defendants maliciously prevented him from selling control of the De Forest Phonofilm Corporation in 1926 to William Fox. He said they feared Fox might become a formidable competitor.

LYNCH, TUCKER VOTE COMPILED

Records compiled yesterday by the official return board for the two members of the First Legislative District, comprising the First, Third and Fifth wards, gave the Republican nominees, Joseph R. Lynch, incumbent, 5,418 votes and Walter E. Tucker, Negro, 4,961 votes.

As Republican nominee, Tucker succeeded the late Assemblyman Joseph C. Marcus.

The Democratic nominees, Charles J. McCall and P. J. Donohue, received 1,264 and 799 votes, respectively.

PINCHOT'S LEAD TOPS 80,000

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 8.—(AP)—Revised figures on Tuesday's election from all districts in the state, except six in Philadelphia, give Gifford Pinchot, Republican candidate for governor, a lead of 81,542 over John M. Hemphill, Democratic-Liberal party nominee.

The complete, but unofficial, returns from 8,315 districts out of 8,321 in the state, give Pinchot 1,073,679 and Hemphill 992,137. They do not take into account the official count under way in Philadelphia. In this count Hemphill has made steady gains, 18 wards so far officially tabulated adding 8,212 to his total, and increasing his plurality in Philadelphia to 234,198. There are 48 wards in the city.

The official count revealed eight divisions in the first 11 wards in which Pinchot did not receive a vote.

Winds Balk Hawks' Havana Return Hop

HAVANA, Nov. 8.—(AP.)—Weather reports showing an 80-mile wind at an altitude of 4,000 feet last night caused Capt. Frank Hawks to postpone until Sunday morning his hop from Havana to New York.

SEVENTH MAN ILL FROM RUM

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Nov. 8.—With the finding of Frank Williams, 45, unconscious and blind, in a clump of bushes near the scene of the poison liquor party which already has taken six lives, investigators said the seventh fatality was imminent.

Williams was one of the five missing known to have attended the "party."

Officers reported that near the body of Williams was discovered a gallon can containing the dregs of the death liquor. This may lead to positive clues as to the source of the poison.

Reports from the emergency room of the hospital indicated Williams was critically ill.

FIREMEN TO AID CITY'S NEEDY

Appeal for clothing today was made for the needy through Fire Chief Richard Smith, who has promised co-operation with the Volunteers of America for gathering donations at the city's engine houses.

Cast-off clothing, bedding and all materials no longer needed by the owners are asked by Maj. R. H. Ives, of the Volunteers. Contributions are asked to be left at any of the 56 fire engine houses, from where bundles will be sent to the Volunteers headquarters at 724 East Diamond street, North Side. That organization will supply the clothes to needy families without charge, volunteer workers making necessary repairs.

SCHOOL BOARD BANS SALARY RAISES

Announces 1931 Tax Will Be Same as Present; Total Budget Cut Only $4,500

Owing to present business conditions there will be no salary increases considered at present by the finance and administrations committee of the Board of Education, the committee decided last night.

The committee announced the school tax for 1931 would be the same as at present, 11½ mills. A resolution levying the tax at that rate was unanimously adopted by the committee and it will be presented to the board. The board is to levy the tax Monday.

CUT BUDGET $4,500

In announcing there would be no salary increases considered, the finance and administration committee expects to shut off the expected usual requests at budget marking time. The committee has made a total net cut of $4,500 in the recommended budget of $15,601,123.83. Total cuts amounting to $27,500 had been made, but two increases were allowed, amounting to $23,000.

An increase of $10,000 was permitted for payment to the state retirement board for the school district's share of the teachers' retirement fund. An increase of $13,000 was inserted in the budget last night on recommendation of City and School Controller J. P. Kerr, who informed the board of a reorganization in his office and that of City Treasurer Roy D. Schooley, whereby each tax payer will receive three separate bills for school, water and city taxes, to be paid separately at three windows in the treasurer's office. As its share of the cost of special billing machines the school board was asked to pay $13,000, or approximately 60 per cent of the cost.

DEFER PASSION PLAY ACTION

The committee tentatively approved a set-up of $3,000 for special instruction in sight conservation. Action was deferred until Monday on the request from the Rev. James R. Cox, pastor of St. Patrick's Catholic Church, for use of the Schenley High School Auditorium for the presentation of a "Passion Play."

Frank E. Preese and other members of the committee cited objections that had been raised to the use of a public school auditorium for a purely religious play. Other religious organizations wishing to stage benefits and charge admission, it was said, would claim the same privilege if the request were granted.

KNIFE SLAYER SOUGHT, 1 DEAD

Homestead police were called to the Clayburn home late last night and rushed Lewis to the hospital. Barnes, who also roomed at the house, fled. The Clayburn woman was being held today as a material witness.

EAST END MAN HELD IN KILLING

MAY BE PITTSBURGHER

West Virginia authorities reported the body of an unidentified man had been found on the camp lot the day after the party had broken up. He was wrapped in bed clothing from the camp, police say they have been informed. In a camp stove was found a blue suit worn by the dead man partially burned.

West Virginia authorities believe the victim is a Pittsburgher, lured to the camp to be murdered. A West Virginia officer is en route to Pittsburgh to return Zambrano to New Martinsville. The prisoner, local detectives say, has announced his intention of waiving extradition.

FIRST CLUE ON TELETYPE

Efficiency of the teletype system was demonstrated, detectives assert, by the arrest of Zambrano. Description and license number of the automobile came over the wire to county detective headquarters at 2:35 a. m. today. Harry Chalfant, operator, checked the license number and telephoned to city detectives Zambrano's address. He was arrested at 5:03 a. m., less than two hours after the word was received.

HOOVER PLEA ON SLUMP PLANNED

December Message to Ask Congress to Kill Legal Shackles on Business

By WILLIAM S. NEAL.
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—President Hoover will discuss the business situation in detail in his message to Congress in December, with recommendation that legislative shackles be removed to encourage business to spread the call, "Full Steam Ahead," it was predicted in administration circles.

With tariff legislation temporarily shelved, many officials of the administration believe Congress can instill the optimism which will hasten business recovery, by its action in the short session.

PREPARING MESSAGE

Mr. Hoover has held frequent conferences with financial and industrial leaders in the last few weeks, and is said to be gathering elaborate data for use in preparing his message.

The President hinted in his speech to the American Federation of Labor that he would favor changes in the anti-trust laws to permit combinations which would remove disastrous competition and halt over-production.

OTHER PROPOSALS

Other proposals which the President may discuss include:

Legislation to encourage conservation of oil and halting of overproduction which co-operation has not yet stopped.

Measures authorizing American firms to co-operate in purchasing necessary raw materials abroad, to insure a steady supply at fair prices. The President indorsed such a bill before he entered the White House.

Assurance to business that the fund of the Federal Farm Board will not be used to destroy legitimate business, in order to unduly hasten the organization of farmers' co-operatives.

Liberalization of the national banking laws to permit further branch banking, but under strict supervision.

Hastening of railroad consolidation legislation, to settle a question which has thrown plans of many railroads into confusion.

NEED LICENSES, DEALERS TOLD

Two hundred produce dealers of the tri-state district at a meeting in the sales room of the Pittsburgh Independent Fruit Auction yesterday, were told of the new bill which requires commission merchants, dealers and brokers to secure licenses. The bill became effective June 10.

Speakers were F. G. Robb, in charge of the regulatory branch of the United States Department of Agriculture, and E. L. Roberts, general manager and secretary of the National League of Commission Merchants, with headquarters in Washington. Clarence Miller, president of the Pittsburgh branch of the National League of Commission Merchants, presided.

Coolidge Urges Keeping Judicial Standard High

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., Nov. 8.

To the Editor of the Sun-Telegraph:

A few judges in different localities have recently come under suspicion.

The first requisite of every unit of government is to furnish order and security. That means, in time of peace, protection from crimes against the person and property. The next requirement is the enforcement of legal obligations. To furnish a process for redress when these rights have been invaded, courts have been established. It is their duty to punish crime and decide causes between individuals. If the courts break down, the citizen has little remedy for public or private grievances.

Calvin Coolidge

Because of these indispensable public duties, it is necessary for the courts to be kept impartial, detached and pure. Any failure in this respect is a blow at the very vitals of our government. The fundamentals of security and justice would both be gone. The result would be virtually unchecked crime and anarchy.

The general character of our bench is very high. It must be kept so. Any charges formally and seriously made of improper conduct by judges must be thoroughly investigated and all guilt actively prosecuted, that our courts be purged of every suspicion. A corrupt judge is one of the worst enemies of the republic.

CALVIN COOLIDGE.

COURT RULES MONDAY ON CHILD CUSTODY

WOMAN SUES FATHER FOR BOYS

Youths Taken From School, Mother Charges; Family Divided Over Week-end

Mrs. Florence McKee Hespenheide, of the William Pitt Apartments, 5610 Elmer street, seeking the custody of her sons, Henry W. Hespenheide III, 10, and McKee Hespenheide, 9, was allowed the custody of the younger boy over the week-end while a decision by Judge Frank P. Patterson, announced for Monday, is pending.

CHILDREN CHOOSE

Henry will remain with his father, Carl F. Hespenheide, owner of a service and filling station at 1501 Irwin avenue, North Side, over which is located his apartment. Judge Patterson permitted the boys to decide with which parent each would stay pending his decision, after a hearing yesterday in Common Pleas Court on the writ of habeas corpus procured by Mrs. Hespenheide.

She alleged the two boys were spirited away from the Greenbrier Military Academy, Lewisburg, W. Va., last Sunday by their father, with the aid of their third and oldest son, William Hespenheide, 14, who lives with his father, and who is a student at the Arnold School, Braddock avenue.

BOY IGNORES MOTHER

He would not speak to his mother in the court corridor, she testified, due to his father's influence.

The Hespenheides were married in 1914 and Mrs. Hespenheide procured a divorce in December, 1927, keeping the three boys. The oldest went to his father two years ago and she placed the other two in the military academy in September last, at an expenditure exceeding $1,000 each annually, she testified. Her income from her mother's estate is ample, she testified, declaring that Hespenheide had not contributed one cent to their support.

The father admitted driving to the school and sending the oldest son in for the others, without consulting school authorities, but declared the boys wanted to be taken away, according to records. He is remarried.

GLIDING CHAMP IN EXHIBITION

Augustine C. Haller, of 616 Washington road, Mt. Lebanon, who now holds the national distance gliding record of 21.1 miles, will give a gliding and soaring exhibition at Mapleview Park, McMurray road, near Washington, Pa., Sunday afternoon. The exhibition will be witnessed by members of the Washington Gliding Club.

Haller won his record at the national soaring competition, sponsored by the National Gliding Association at Elmira, N. Y., October 4. The prize was $250. Mr. Haller took part in several contests in Germany.

The glider Haller will use Sunday was imported from Germany. It has a wingspread of 52 feet, the length over all is 19½ feet, weighs 360 pounds when empty and 500 pounds with pilot. Fritz Ackermann, of Kassel, Germany, the builder of Haller's glider, will attend the exhibition.

PITT PARADE HALTED

Police temporarily broke up the Pitt students' parade yesterday afternoon in Fifth avenue near Chatham street, but permitted it to proceed downtown when the parade leaders produced a city permit.

Later more excitement occurred at the Pennsylvania Station and near the Academy Theater, where Pitt and a group of Tech students met, and joined hands against the police, as the officers sought to prevent the army of students from their traditional "crashing the gate" at the theater.

The Pitt students were discharged by Magistrate T. D. Jones in Morals Court today on request of Assistant Supt. of Police Benjamin R. Marshall and Inspector Albert Beebe, and the students immediately gave rousing cheers for both.

Police explained they had stopped the parade because the students were unable to produce their parade permit but that they later secured a duplicate.

A holdup man who was outwitted by a 17-year-old clerk during an attempt to rob the H. G. Golden Radio Service, at 1401 Irwin avenue, last night, was being sought by police today.

Posing as a customer, the robber looked at some radio tubes before he pulled out a revolver and ordered William Young, the clerk, of 1410 Irwin avenue, to tell where the money was kept. Young pointed to a desk. While the thug was searching it, the youthful clerk opened a cash drawer near where he was standing, took out $26 and put it in his pocket. Failing to find the cash, the gunman ordered Young into the rear room and bound him with radio wire.

Safe crackers failed in an attempt to loot the safe in the office of the West Disinfecting Company, at 400 East North avenue, last night. Entering the building by way of a window, the yeggs chopped off the combination knob. They fled when the janitress came in, leaving two sledge hammers and chisels.

Woman Held Under $3,000 Bond in Raid

Charged with keeping a disorderly house, Mrs. Nellie Callahan, of 218 Sandusky street, North Side, was under $3,000 bond for court today following a hearing before Justice of the Peace Margaret Morgan, of Sewickley, last night. Six women arrested in the raid a week ago were held as witnesses, and two men and two employes discharged.

One-Man Majority Important When He Weighs 200

By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER

Republican outlook for 1932 is plenty dark.

They might as well be using a rubber boot for a telescope.

But he's fat.

The spokesman for the G. O. P. issued his statement on the wet and dry situation in the suburbs.

"We waited to hear from the outlying counties. All we heard was a low gurgle.

"We put up the wrong candidate. If he is the life of the party—we're dead.

"We are willing to allow the Democrats to run the country for the next four years if they can find it.

"A Republican administration with a Democratic Congress is a marvelous arrangement.

"What difference does a lonely Democratic plurality make? We welcome him. When they're handing out nothing but kicks in the face we can afford to feed another mouth."

CATCH SUSPECT AFTER CHASE

Chasing an alleged automobile thief, Wagonmen David Wilson and John Roach early this morning succeeded in captruing George Davis, 29, a Negro of 719 Carey way, South Side. Davis is alleged to have stolen the machine of R. W. Blackburn of 5467 Penn avenue from Elm and Pasteur streets where it had been parked.

The wagonmen had been sent to Washington street and Webster avenue to arrest a drunk but they were unable to discover any upon arriving on the scene. A moment later a machine without lights sped down Webster avenue and both officers called to the driver to halt. Then Blackburn rushed up, hatless and excited, and informed them it had been his car and that it had been stolen. The policemen leaped on to the patrol and chased the machine to Sixth avenue and Wood street where they arrested Davis.

FIGHTS FOR $12,000 YEARLY

Wants First Agreement to Be Put Into Force in Appeal in Reno Court

RENO, Nevada, Nov. 7.—(AP.)—Upon the heels of an announcement that Sinclair Lewis had won the Nobel Prize in literature with his novel "Babbit," his former wife, Grace Heggler Lewis, today started proceedings before the Nevada Supreme Court in an effort to procure $1,600 a month alimony as originally provided in a Reno divorce decree.

When the divorce was granted to Mrs. Lewis April 16, 1928, on a charge of desertion, a settlement was made. It provided that Lewis establish a $50,000 trust fund for a 16-year-old son of the couple and that he pay Mrs. Lewis $1,000 a month so long as she did not remarry and his income did not fall below $48,000 a year.

Later, Lewis, who in the meantime had married Dorothy Thompson, author and lecturer, came to Reno and procured a modification of the agreement.

In her appeal from the Reno court modification reducing the payments, Mrs. Lewis asks that the Supreme Court return to force the original order providing $1,000 a month alimony.

HAYS NEUTRAL IN MOVIE WAR

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 8.—(Universal.)—With members of United Artists reiterating their charges of monopoly and unfair discrimination against Fox-West Coast Theaters, the warfare between the two organizations today settled down to a long campaign.

Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, who is in Los Angeles, declined to take any part in the battle between the producers and the theaters.

"No comment," was Hays' laconic reply to all questions.

Further possibility that United Artists might build a chain of theaters in an effort to break what is termed the West Coast Theater's monopoly loomed today.

A report was circulated, but as quickly denied, that Howard Hughes, who recently became associated with the Schenck group, might build a number of theaters along the Pacific Coast.

AUTOS LACKING O. K. BANNED

With 250 arrests already made, members of the state highway patrol today are continuing their watch for motorists whose cars do not bear the sticker showing their machine has been approved during the compulsory state inspection. Capt. Wilson G. Price, head of the patrol said 250 arrests had been made Wednesday and Thursday.

Motorists whose cars have not yet been inspected must keep their cars in their garages for 30 days. The only other means of escape is to get to an official inspection station, possibly through back ways and alleys before being picked up and arrested. The fine for failure to have machines inspected is $10, Paul C. Wolff, secretary of the Automobile Club of Pittsburg said. Motorists picked up by highway patrolmen must pay their fine and immediately have the machine inspected and approved or face arrest the next time he tries to use the roads before December 1.

'NUMBERS' SUIT AFTER HOLDUP

As a result of a holdup of an alleged clearing house headquarters on the second floor of a building at Wood and Ross streets, Wilkinsburg, Vincent Tolonia, alleged proprietor, faced a hearing on a charge of keeping a gambling house.

Two bandits entered the place yesterday afternoon and ordered Tolonia and his two assistants to throw up their hands, police reported. After taking $300 from Tolonia's pockets, the thugs ordered the three men into a cupboard and fled.

Tolonia, who also runs a shoemaking establishment, spread the alarm and when police from the Wilkinsburg station, half a block away, arrived they found everyone else gone but Tolonia. He was released on a $100 forfeit.

Fund Assists Family of 8 Depending on $3 Weekly

This is the second of a series of stories in the lives of people in the Pittsburgh district, emphasizing the necessity of the Welfare Fund's campaign for $1,520,248. The names are fictitious.

An automobile hit Harry Jackson. The accident put him in a hospital for three months. When he was discharged Jackson was a mental invalid, unable to hold a job, through an injury to the brain.

Seven children and his wife were dependent on Jackson's small income, earned in a Pittsburgh steel mill. The oldest son, 15, found a job as messenger, earning $3 a week. He was forced to leave high school to attend a trade school.

The family decided that was the best way to provide for his sisters and brothers until they were able to help—equip the oldest to work at a trade, and allow him to work when he had learned. His job some day will be to support that family. His mother is not able to work, as the shock of her husband's accident has created a critical nervous condition. Their savings were gone when their case was related to the Welfare Fund.

Immediate steps were taken to provide for the family. They had no other resources nor relatives. The family was considered well-worth helping, as the children give promise of becoming good, self-reliant citizens.

Screen Acquires New Star For Jenny Lind Role

By REGINA CREWE.

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—A bright new star has come to dazzle Broadway screens. Or, rather, a girl long established as a stellar luminary in other mediums, plucks fresh laurels from green pastures.

She is fair—with that soft, warm, human beauty so much to be desired, and so seldom found. Thec harm she radiates in person proves filmable, and her adaptability as a dramatic artist is definitely demonstrated.

Add to these cinematic qualities a vocal gift with power to soothe souls and make the world's heart beat fast and you have a portrait of Grace Moore, who makes her photo-dramatic debut in "A Lady's Moral" at the Capitol Theater.

The vehicle provided for the new star's bow is a love tale which makes it possible for audiences to hear the voice so enthusiastically received at the Metropolitan Opera House, and at the same time weaves a romantic fabric as a background for the embroidery of her golden tones.

Jenny Lind, the glamorous "Swedish Nightingale," is the character Miss Moore portrays. She is introduced at the height of her fame. Her career is sketched through the dark days following the tragic loss of her voice, to the miracle of its restoration and the more brilliant triumphs of her American tour.

Her voicee is by far the most pleasing to be recruited for the cinema. She cambines with this exquisite vocal talent an appearance and personality which assure her a place in the heart of a greater public than she has ever known.

CHURCH HEADS TO PREVIEW 'LOURDES'

Invitations Sent Religious Leaders to Presentation Of Pittsburgh Made Movie

When the motion picture, "Bernadette of Lourdes," which opens at the Davis Theater next Friday, November 14, completes its engagement here, the film will be presented to the Rt. Rev. H. C. Boyle, bishop of the Catholic diocese of Pittsburgh, to be sent to Pope Pius in Rome. It is the first picture ever attempted of that famous shrine, and is also the first complete Pittsburgh-made picture with a cast composed entirely of Pittsburghers. The dramatic sequence was written by Mary A. Gallagher, who studied at the Carnegie Tech school of drama.

Invitations have been extended to Bishop Boyle, all priests and nuns in the diocese, and to ministers of all denominations to attend a private presentation of the picture at the theater at 2:30 o'clock next Wednesday. The faculty of Duquesne University, Seton Hill, and other institutions have also been invited.

Special days have been set aside for parochial schools, and a prize essay contest will be held for school children in Pittsburgh and environs. The first prize will be $50, the second $35, and the third $15. Wrist watches will be given for the next five best essays.

While the picture pivots around Bernadette, which is played by Miss Mary Zalac, of 1519 Rialto street, an outstanding characterization is portrayed by Miss Alice Vollmer, of 120 Richey street, who plays the part of Jean, a friend of Bernadette. Miss Vollmer, who is a graduate of Perry High School, passed the highest screen test out of more than two score of girls who applied for the part. Her emotional interpretations of a difficult role has caused much favorable comment.

The report showed the regular corps includes 120 chaplains of various ranks, and that there are 1,120 in the reserve corps.

PASSION PLAY NOV. 17-22

During the week of November 17-22 at Syria Mosque Adolf Fassnacht will be seen still enacting the role which he has portrayed for years in the Freiburg Passion Play. With him now is a comely matron, his wife, who takes the part of Mary, the Mother. The daughter, Amelia Fassnacht, portrays the character Mary Magdalena. This romance to Fassnacht is the most beautiful part of his career, which began when he was an infant in the arms, appearing as the babe in the manger, when his parents were on a Passion Play pilgrimage of Europe.

No desire for popularity lurks within the hearts of these humble players, who are bound to return periodically to present the play at Baden, in its original setting. Whenever their travels permit, Herr Fassnacht and his frau and daughter obtain an apartment and the other less fortunate members of the cast eagerly await an invitation to join the family for a meal.

There are several families accompanying the cast and they utilize every possible opportunity of setting up home life even though but temporarily.

Plain living plays an important part in the life of the Christus of Freiburg. Keeping in perfect physical condition has permitted Herr Fassnacht to be always on hand when the play is given, and during the 7,000 performances in which he has appeared a postponement has been necessary only once, when some faulty stage property injured his foot.

GROUP MEETING FOR DEACONS AND ELDERS

Session Set for Sunday Afternoon at Bryn Mawr Church in McKeesport

A group meeting of elders and deacons of the disciple churches of the McKeesport area will be held tomorrow afternoon at the Bryn Mawr Christian Church, McKeesport.

This will be the first of a series of such meetings to be held under the auspices of the Christian Evangelistic Society of Allegheny County. The Rev. C. C. Crawford, evangelist, will address the meeting on "Qualifications, Duties and Problems of Local Church Officers." An open forum and general discussion will follow the address.

Congregations of McKeesport, Bryn Mawr, Duquesne, Dravosburg, Homestead, Braddock and Turtle Creek have been invited to attend.

MOSLEM RITES, MASS JOINED

CORDOVA, Spain, Nov. 8.—(AP.)—The high chant of the Moslem religious service rose in the ancient Cathedral of Cordova for the first time in 500 years.

Moorish students, touring the old province of Andalusia, which was wrested from their forebears five centuries ago, halted in a corridor of the cathedal, where verses of the Koran still decorate the walls.

Oblivious of their whereabouts, they burst into the chant as a Catholic mass was being sung in another part of the church. The Catholic clergy, realizing the students were touring under government auspices, suspended their mass until the chant ended.

It was probably the first time in history that services of the two religions have been performed simultaneously without restriction in the same temple.

Ralph Banks, after another year of study abroad, gave a song recital in Carnegie Music Hall last night. There were many friends in the audience who received him very enthusiastically.

The program was very intelligently chosen and showed real broad knowledge of song literature. The old English songs were particularly welcome, and the new songs of Savasta emphasized once again the tendencies in modern Italian music.

Banks' voice is a high baritone, a little husky in the deep register, and quite beautiful in the high pianissimo, which, however, he has a tendency to overwork beyond good taste, and thereby loses much of the natural force in his declamation. The Mozart is still too big a task for his abilities, but his ballads with simple melodies have a certain charm, which compels one to believe he may find his place in musical comedy.

Emilio Roxas played accompaniments.

DEDICATION SET FOR TOMORROW

Bishop Alexander Mann tomorrow will dedicate the new edifice of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Washington road and Mayfair drive, Mt. Lebanon. The ceremony will bring together a large number of the clergy and many prominent laymen in the Protestant Episcopal diocese of Pittsburgh.

Preceding the exercises in the church, Bishop Mann and the clergy, heading a procession with cross bearer and vested choir, will circle the building and be received at the portal by the vestry and church wardens. The bishop will knock three times on the church door in accordance with an ancient ecclesiastical custom, and, being admitted, will go forward to the holy table. The dedication of the building, the altar, the font, the pulpit, the organ and the linens and service pieces will follow.

The Rev. E. L. B. Pielow, rector of St. Paul's, will make an address of greeting and the Rev. Dr. E. J. Van Etten, rector of Calvary Church, will speak. In the morning the St. Paul's Church School will hold a service in the church.

The building is of Indiana limestone and is regarded as a striking example of pure English Gothic architecture. The interior furnishing is of dark oak. Sixteen memorial windows have been installed.

NON-SECTARIAN LECTURES CARDED

Wilkinsburg Church Arranges Talk Series by Fathers As Mission Service Ends

A series of lectures for both Catholics and non Catholics interested in religion will be given in St. James' Church, Franklin avenue, Wilkinsburg, by the fathers of the New York Apostolate, next week. The lecturers will be explanatory and not controversial, church officials said, and they are to mark the final week of mission services at the church.

Monday night's lecture will be "Religion: Is It Necessary? Which One?" Tuesday, "Divinity of Christ—Fundamentalism or Modern?" Wednesday, "Government of the Church: Spiritual or Political?" Thursday, "Confession: to God or to Man?" Friday, "Marriage: Why Does the Church Dictate?" Saturday, no lecture, and Sunday, 11:15 a. m., "The Mass: Worship or Idolatry?" 7:30 p. m., "Christian Unity: Why and How?"

Written questions on the subjects listed, if placed in the "Question Box," at the church door, will be answered each evening. Music will be by the choir and organist. Ministers of Wilkinsburg and other sections of the city, as well as laymen, have been invited to take part in the services.

ARMISTICE DAY AT EPIPHANY

Armistice Day will be observed in Epiphany Church, Washington Place, Sunday with a solemn high mass at 11 o'clock and a special sermon appropriate to the occasion by the Rev. L. A. O'Connell.

Rev. O'Connell

The combined junior and senior choirs, will render a new "military mass" under the personal direction of Prof. John Sedlacew, with C. Backman at the organ, accompanied by a full orchestra.

The sanctuary will be fittingly decorated in the nation's colors, and a monument inscribed with the names of the nine boys from Epiphany who made the supreme sacrifice, will occupy a place of honor within the chancel rail.

Special reservations are being made in the middle aisle for the 436 boys who enlisted from the parish, as well as for military organizations.

Yesterday one of the very loveliest debuts of the season took place when petite, blonde Frances Kier, daughter of the Frank J. Kiers, of Beechwood boulevard, was presented at a tea given by her mother in the family home. The house was decorated simply with chrysanthemums in yellow and bronze, with white in the library.

Charming Debutante

The main hall where the bud received with her mother and their aides, was a bower of her gift bouquets. They received before an unusual arrangement of cibotium ferns, interspersed with tall standards of gift bouquets, with a miniature hedge of ferns. The balustrade leading up from the hall was festooned with yellow chrysanthemums and pink roses. The tea table was centered with ward roses and tall gold candelabra holding peach tinted tapers. The orchestra in the music room was screened by a hedge of bambos and ferns.

The bud was charming in a gown of sandstone transparent velvet made in straight lines, with inset flares below the knee, of chiffon over velvet, and there was a brief jacket with short sleeves banded with sable, and tying at the waist with a streamer of the velvet. Her mother wore a tunic dress, with the tunic of white satin, and the skirt of black velvet, and a corsage of orchids. The sleeves were trimmed with ermine. Receiving with the bud's other aides were her two houseguests, Margaret Smith, of Franklin, Pa., and Virginia Hannah, of Montclair, N. J. Margaret wore a distinctive gown of black lace with a jacket having a smart stand-up collar. Virginia wore figured crepe in shades of beige and sepia with a jacket of the same material, banded at the sleeves with sable.

Costume Is Pastel

Others aiding the bud were debutantes of the season. Aiding Mrs. Kier were Mrs. H. H. McClintic, Mrs. George W. J. Bissell, Mrs. J. J. Bissell, Mrs. Franklin G. McIntosh, of Franklin, Pa., sister of Mrs. Kier; Mrs. J. Boyd McKown, Mrs. T. Raymond Evans, Mrs. William Maclay Hall, Mrs. Frederick I. Merrick, Mrs. B. R. B. Townsend, Mrs. Albert G. Wells, Mrs. C. H. E. Succop, Mrs. Howard S. Evans, Mrs. Porter S. Kier and Mrs. Samuel M. Kier.

Tonight Frances and her house guests will be honored at a dinner dance being given by her cousin, Porter Sawyer Kier, Jr., son of the Porter Sawyer Kiers, of Darlington road, which will be held in the Longue Vue Country Club.

VIONNET ESTABLISHES EMPIRE LINE IN THE FASHION WORLD

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Nov. 8.—Everybody has some successful "line" or another with which to get by. The same goes for business enterprises. And so Vionnet proudly points to the "Empire" line that she offered to the world and which has "taken" splendidly here. The high-waisted bodice often of surplice cut, and the skirt that molds the waist and hips only to flare in a graceful circular line between knee and ankle, combines to create a clean-lined silhouette, which is well-nigh irresistible. It is so good for all types of figures sitting kindly on the slim, the not-so-slim, the youthful and the obviously mature. And so it is not to be wondered at that Vionnet has again turned the trick.

TO SHOW OUR readers exactly what we mean by the Empire silhouette as sponsored by the brilliant Vionnet, we append two sketches of an afternoon ensemble featuring that line. The high-waisted surplice bodice is of white satin with a diagonal attachment to the skirt. The skirt goes completely empire and so it molds the waist and hips quite definitely and flares with the proper circular midway between the knee and the ankle, these two members by the way, being seemingly quite content to serve merely as lines to mark a flare or a low-set flounce. Over the blouse is worn a very short, but quite important coatee of ermine with the same diagonal waistline and a draped shawl collar following the lines of the bodice. The sleeves, even though they are ermine, flare below the elbow and are shirred in at the waist. As an extra touch of smartness, a small round ermine muff with a cuff at either opening, is carried with the coat. Even those who are prone to classify the ensemble as something passe, won't be able to pass this one by so easily

SIDEWALKS of PITTSBURGH

By William Pfarr

William Pfarr

On the walls of County Treasurer John Francies' office are masks of Oliver Cromwell, Lincoln and Napoleon. Then there are a few dozen pictures, three or four of Penrose, and single portraits of John Calhoun, Henry Clay, Thaddeus Stevens and others who have been written up in history.

We didn't see one of Gov. Pennypacker, but there was undoubtedly one somewhere, because Pennypacker was an idol of Mr. Francies.

Mr. Francis is along in years, but he is well preserved. He has been a politician for a long time and he is as well known as a story teller. From Pennypacker to Quay to Penrose he has met all of Pennsylvania's historical characters of his time. Very seriously he points out that all great men have their human side, but that you have to catch them off their guard; you have to find them with their children, or before a fireplace, or alongside a glass of beer, although Mr. Francies did not say that the names we have mentioned were ever alongside beer. He recalls how serious the late John Arbuckle, one of Pittsburgh's first big business men, was as he sat at his desk, but that he was so much putty in the hands of his daughter. He tel. how Quay dominated Pennsylvania for years and was himself dominated by his housekeeper, who once threatened not to allow him to leave the Quay home to keep an appointment with national figures unless he put on his overcoat.

Francies remembers the period when walking became a fad all over Pennsylvania. A good friend of Penrose announced at the height of the fad that he would go so far as to walk from Harrisburg to Philadelphia. The papers exploited the event.

Later, the friend was boasting to Penrose about the hike.

"Yes," Penrose agreed, "I read that you walked from Harrisburg to Philadelphia and I noticed that you picked the route which had the most saloons."

Then there is the story that Francies, a Scot, tells about the Scots. In Ireland one of the natives met a visiting Scot whom he hadn't seen in years. They had never been the closest friends, but the Irishman was the perfect host. He insisted that Sandy (the Scot, you you know) stay at his home and partake at his board. Pat (the Irishman) escorted Sandy to the banquets and taverns and never once did he allow his guest to pay the expense. In fact, Sandy was so pleased with the reception that he remained at Pat's for weeks upon weeks.

Finally Sandy decided that he had better return to his native heath. In his pocket were the five pounds with which he had arrived, but Pat's lowly finances were depleted.

"Enough of that, Pat," Sandy protested. "Ye've fed me and put me up in your home for weeks. Ye took me to banquets and dinners and paid the expense. And I'll have no more of it. Now we'll toss to see who the cigars are on."

WILL ROGERS SAYS

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:
BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Nov. 8.

Every late edition brings in news of another belated Democratic victory. If they keep on counting, maybe by Monday Al Smith will be in. Did you ever hear of as crazy a law as Kentucky has? They make 'em wait 24 hours before counting the votes. That's to give the counters a chance to think it over and be honest.

Will Rogers

Twenty-four hours is supposed to make you honest in Kentucky. Why not wait till both candidates are dead, then there can be no crookedness shown. Then they wonder why we don't take our lawmakers serious. Yours,

WILL.

Jim Tully Voices Vigorous Criticism of Movie Celebrities

By HARRISON CARROLL

(Copyright, 1930, Premier Syndicate.)

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 8.

Having had his fling at acting in John Gilbert's new picture, Jim Tully, one of Hollywood's pugnacious spirits, has returned to the writing of novels.

"George Moore was right," he says. "Acting is the lowest of the arts. You can teach a child to act, but not to paint or write."

Tully finds that Hollywood lacks the quality of understanding. His opinions of various celebrities are couched in vigorous terms.

Jim Tully

Of Louis Wolheim, another pugnacious spirit, he says:

"I like him immensely, but he is a college professor at heart, who spends most of his spare time playing bridge. He is a boiled shirt trying to look wrinkled."

Buddy Rogers, he terms:

"A sweet little boy lost on his way to Sunday school."

"A Scotch reflex of Ben Hecht."

"It is a tragedy," says Tully, "that Eisenstein has had to leave Hollywood because he cannot adjust his mentality to the average director's middle-class attitude towards the drama. Most directors are not born, they are made. They have run away from home as children and joined some cheap theatrical company, becoming ham actors and later finding themselves stranded in Hollywood."

Not all of Hollywood jars the Irish writer, however. Lewis Milestone is "a miracle among directors," and Paul Bern "might have stepped out of the pages of a book of chivalry."

Tully is defiant of his critics.

"My chief regret," he says, "is that most of the written knocks against me are so dull. The editors would do much better if they would pay me to write them."

COULDN'T FOOL HIM

Broadway sends this one about Clara Bow:

The red-head was about to drive out of a garage for a scene in her new picture. She was at the wheel of a shiny motor car.

Clara Bow

One of a group of people on the sidewalk observed a property man holding aloft a gauze sun deflector, about five feet in diameter.

"If she does that trick," he exclaimed, "I'll eat my hat."

"Do what?" he was asked.

"Make that car jump through that little hoop."

FULTON AND SHERIDAN HEROINE MARRIES FOR MONEY

By MILDRED FILLMORE

Nancy Carroll steps out again in another dramatic role in "Laughter," which opened yesterday on the Fulton and Sheridan Square screens. Remember her emotional dramatics in "Devil's Holiday?"

Her newest portrayal has her as a girl "dirty with riches," who needs laughter as a cleansing tonic. She's a chorus girl who marries a millionaire and discovers that gold glitters all right, but love is something else again. She spurns a young pianist-composer for a big money man, with a daughter as old as herself. But the finale lands her in Paris where she and her pianist-composer laugh right into the fade-out.

Lots of other things enter into the story, of course. There is, for example, a young sculptor who is "mad" about Nancy. He wants to kill himself when he can't have her and he does, too, but not until later, when he is foiled in his efforts to marry "money."

Frederic March does sincere work in the pianist-composer part. Frank Morgan, as the millionaire, who gets extravagant enough to buy his secretary a new typewriter on the day he makes $8,450,000, is a sensible actor.

The production is crowded with lavish motor cars and somber police patrols; with dingy studios and elaborate apartments; with gay parties and some not so gay.

Short screen entertainment is on the bills in both theaters.

FOOTBALL THRILLS IN ENRIGHT PROGRAM

By BARBARA I. WILBERT.

"College Lovers," at the Enright, gives us a chance to see some thrilling football battles, a chance to know intimately the college gridiron stars. We see "Tiny and Eddie," the team on whom the winning of the championship depends, in action—and then we see them break.

Yes, it was a girl, Marion Nixon. Though football heroes mean nothing to her, she shows us some real school spirit by placing her personal feelings in the background in an effort to save the day for her alma mater. She almost loses, the team almost loses, but in steps the man of her heart, Jack Whiting, which spells victory for them all.

Perhaps there was a little too much field work, but after all, so it is in college life, and as a consequence in "College Lovers."

If radio television could be as good as that given us by Dick Powell with his orchestra and dancers in "Jazz Static" we would be "all for it." The Kentuckians from Buffalo can certainly tap to the tunes of the Southland.

Popular people, these Westerners, such as Evans and Mayer. We just can't seem to get enough of them, but we have to let them go as Johnny Mitchell "consoles" us at the organ.

New Bill Arranged For Club Mirador

The new program at the Club Mirador, Second and McClure avenues, Homestead, has Al Schenk as master of ceremonies. The bill includes Easter and Hazleton dancing team; Adele Curtiss, blues singer; Olga Mundy, singer, and Helen Mae McKein, speciality dancer.

AS RADIO ANNOUNCER WILLIAM HAINES IS MUCH FUN

By GEORGE SEIBEL

At last William Haines has a picture that sparkles with genuine fun in an unhackneyed plot. "Remote Control" it is called, and William is a radio announcer. He is a fresh guy, as usual, but his freshness is not vulgar. It makes people laugh without giving them an irresistible urge to kick him. So Mary Doran, object of his affections, has to slap him only once.

There is much amusing satire of the radio racket in "Remote Control." Haines puts on Santa Claus whiskers to tell a bedtime story, he turns the wheel of the applause machine, and a number of other diverting incidents make it apparent that somebody has decided a few new ideas won't hurt any scenario.

VILLAIN IS PSYCHIC

Another new kink in the plot is the villain as a psychic and occultist who gives advice over the radio. That a criminal should take advantage of popular superstition in this way might even be a profitable revelation to the police department. Well, the master criminal, played well by John Miljan, has to get the radio announcer out of the way; so his mob capture him and keep him prisoner, creating the impression that he was the leader of the Ghost Gang.

The device of the dancing dolls by means of which he thwarts the plot is ingenious, and the whole picture is both thrilling and funny.

"OLD MAN RIVER"

The principal feature of the very happy stage show is Jules Bledsoe himself, singing "Old Man River" as he sang it in "Show Boat"—also the Toreador Song from "Carmen."

The evolutions of the Chester Hale Girls in a banquet scene, at the close of which they are transformed into a lovely lobster salad, also are most appetizing.

Montrose and Reynolds in a comedy scene and the Three Small Brothers in whirlwind dancing gave diversity and spice to the program. It was a high-class program throughout—even Wild Oscar got his audience to sing "Mandalay" and David Pesetzki wove rhapsodic Liszt music into gypsy melodies.

WALTER WINCHELL On Broadway

Query

I think that pity tinged your love for me:
You took a youngster in from out the cold
And showed him that the world held ecstasy,
That nights ran silver and that days were gold;
Sometimes it seemd that I was at a play,
Wide-eyed and breathless as the scenes went on
To my delight—but be that as it may
The play is over and the vision gone.

Yet here I sit, quite slow to understand,
That I must leave and face the world again;
That I must stamp the flame your love has fanned,
And learn anew that life holds only pain;

I wonder if my lovely holiday
Was worth the price that I'll be forced to pay!
—Young Man of Manhattan.

People You Could Choke

The pirating of gags is merely one of the countless annoyances in vaudeville. Ask Fenton and Fields about the time they were playing in Green Bay and a duo of third rate comics were on ahead of them and told their best joke.

As the spectators were rocking in their seats from laughter, one of the hams (who was near the wings) turned to Fenton and indifferently said:

"You weren't going to use it this show, were you?"

The Retort Perfect

After the testimonial dinner to Ripley at the Friars the other night an admirer ankled up to Bugs Baer and cooed:

"You were positively fine tonight, Mr. Baer. But didn't I see that Scotch joke you told in one of the college magazines?"

"No," replied Bugs pleasantly enough, "not yet."

Just for the Pun of It

An anonymous clown wants to spoil today's column by making up sentences containing the words "annex" — "poison" — "Cadillac" and "psychic" like these:

"Yah, ve haf hem annex!" "Poison goils together, me and Mamie O'Rourke;" "She went motor-riding and found out how a Cadillac;" "Meet my pal and psychic!"

One of the Better Ones

It was Percy Hammond, however, who once toyed with "estuary" like this:

"I estuary confidentially, ain't she sweet?"

Oop!

Most of the lads who think they are in the public eye, observes LaGuinan, are only cinders.

O, Mr. Wilstach!

Suggested for the Simile Dictionary: Patricia O'Dey's: As self-conscious as a woman past 30 buying her first lipstick . . . Bill Codum's: Chocolate fought the first three heats as though he had more lead in him than Jack Diamond . . . Willie Ox's: Footballs were flying around the field like wet watermelon seeds. . . . Tim McInerney's: As dead as the minstrel show business . . . Anon's: Scarce as a reporter who owns a Rolls Royce . . . Stanley Walker's: They linger longer than the memory of Black Friday, Custer's Last Stand, the General Slocum disaster and the man who cast 24 votes for Underwood . . . T. J. K.'s: As long as a Mormon's clothes line, and Bugs Baer's: Smaller than a molecue, which could get sore feet walking around a quinine pill.

Nifty

It happened at one of the vaudeville theaters the other matinee. A monologist whose gags weren't getting over noticed a man sleeping in box seat.

"I guess I'm a success, at that," he swifted. "Look at that fellow. I've cured him of insomnia!"

Vallee Well, Madam

"I attended Heywood Broun's show at the Jolson," writes Helen Gill, "and it was something to see—considering you and Rudy Vallee got together publicly. I hope you have buried for all time this utter nonsense that has been centering about you both. I like Rud, a mighty lot. There's no use wondering why women have gone crazy over him. The fact remains that they have, young ones, old ones, nit-wits and highbrows. Please do not laugh at this letter. It is chiefly to say that I was surprised to find you the sort of person you are. From the ever slightly sarcastic tones over the radio and some of the news in your column, one would expect to find a much different type of person.

"From now on, with Rudy Vallee, I shall understand what you are up against as a columnist and not hold anything you may say against anyone I like."

Portrait

We know a woman who has ankled up an altar three times with as many fellers. That is—since the beginning of the radio era. She now lives in a big house she bought with the combined alimony.

In the cellar of this mansion are three radio sets, one a crystal set which belonged to her first husband, the second a battery set, which belonged to her second husband, and the third an electrified thing which belonged to hubby number three.

She always gets over it.

What Langwidge!

"My dear Walter," devotedly writes Gracie Worth of Earl Carroll's show (the name of which escapes us for the paragraph), "you mentioned that I appear undraped in the show. I want to correct this and also tell you that I hear you once wrapped yourself in thought and got arrested for going naked!"

The Earl Carroll influence.

HITS OF BROADWAY NEW STAGE BILLS

The setting of "Street Scene," which comes to the Shubert Alvin Monday, is a massive brownstone front apartment house on one of New York's side streets. In and out of the building, down and up the street go the half hundred actors who portray the various roles.

"Strictly Dishonorable," longest-run play of Broadway's hits of the 1929-30 season, opens a week's engagement in the Nixon Monday.

In addition to playing the leading role in "Lilac Time" Jane Cowl was co-author of the play. Jean May will play the Jane Cowl role in the George Sharp Players production of the play in the Pitt next week.

After an engagement of a week in the Enright, "One Night at Susie's," co-starring Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., and Billie Dove, comes to the Harris screen today.

A GRAND OLD SINNER BY GREAT ACTOR IN WARNER

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

George Arliss' "Old English," film version of his stage success, opened yesterday in the Warner. It is, of course, drama. More, it is a motion picture! It is action!

But don't misunderstand. It is not the usual form of movie action. Instead, it is the action of expression. Before you is an old man, feeble in body, yet alert in mind; an old man whose every gesture, every wrinkle of his face denote the action of a life he has spilled into the past. His dreams are his memories and he makes you live them over with him.

This old man is a Victorian. Not a good man, maybe; not a bad man, surely—but a very human man. He has the grand manner and a terrible temper.

A MASTER ACTOR

The film story has to do with his efforts to stave off bankruptcy for himself and to insure the financial future of two children, who loom, like a pointing finger from the past, reminding of gay days beyond recall.

Mr. Arliss' portrayal is almost uncanny. But then his is an uncanny and swift skill. He looms forth as the master, dwarfing to feeble levels the usual movie heroes and heroines who are on parade week after week.

GRAND OLD SINNER

They—most of the critics and much of the public—heralded Mr. Arliss' "Disraeli" as a great picture. We herald his "Old English" as a great portrayal.

A highly capable cast and some keen direction are assets to this film. But it is Arliss who dominates it all. It is his old Mr. Heythorp who will be remembered long as a great old gentleman and a grand old sinner.

CANTOR FILM STAYS SECOND WEEK IN ALDINE

Eddie Cantor stays on the Aldine screen, Friday's showing marking the opening of the second week of "Whoopee," film version of the Ziegfeld musical comedy, in which Cantor also starred. The story, very humorous, is that of the Owen Davis play, "The Nervous Wreck," and it gives Cantor many opportunities. Produced with proverbial Ziegfeld opulence, it also is pleasing from a spectacular standpoint—all in natural color.

Camera Question Box

The Sun-Telegraph's "Camera Question Box" each day will ask a question of public interest to Pittsburghers, and will photograph those interviewed.

Today's question: Do you agree with Fay King when she says that gay colors are not effeminate and that men should wear them as well as women?

Mr. Simon

ROBERT L. SIMON, North Side, student, Pitt: Personally, I think men look better in conservative colors. Gay colors help women to be attractive, but that is their aim. This is not the case with men.

Mr. Seider

A. SEIDER, Brooklyn, N. Y., sales manager: Gay colors are the latest thing being shown in New York for men. I do most assuredly believe that men should wear them as well as women.

Miss Russell

MISS HELEN RUSSELL, Lawrenceville: Yes, I believe that men should wear gay colors on some occasions, but not to the exclusion of the more subdued and deeper tones. I do not believe there are any colors specifically effeminate.

J. BLOOM, West View, clerk: Yes, I agree with Fay King that gay colors are not effeminate. Men should wear them as well as women; I think it adds to their personal appearance.

Mr. Bloom

Miss Burns

MISS MARIE SMITH, North Side, salesgirl: "Clothes make the man is an old proverb, but a very true one. I don't think men should wear gay colors. They are for women.

Racketeer Shows Symptoms Of Love for Annie

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Polack Annie, red-haired beauty of the Chicago underworld, after killing two gang leaders to avenge the slaying of her sweetheart, goes to New York amd appeals for protection to Silk Freeman, a big shot racketeer. He provides an expensive hotel suite for her and tells her he wants her to help him muscle in on the beauty parlor racket and make millions.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER III.

On Park Ave., Silk Freeman owned an apartment building. And on one of the upper floors, the whole of which he held out, was his pet hide-away. There he smoked his opium pipe every afternoon. There was his sanctum sanctorum. Even his most intimate lieutenants couldn't crash the armored door. Here he had priceless privacy.

The doormen were gunmen. The elevator men were gunmen. Inside the apartment an ex-convict served night and day as his valet, his chef, his Friday. The apartment had no windows. No neighbors ever smelled the aroma of the fresh poppy in its opulent odor or the aftermath of stale hop. Ventilation was by cornucopias belling outward to the free air.

When Silk Freeman came home, in a roll-top desk that didn't even have a lock on it, were bundles of bills—banknotes—currency; grands, half-grands, C-notes—thousand and thousands of dollars worth. He would spend hours writing out deposit slips. The money came in all day long. The men who paid it in attached little memoranda to sheaves. They never even saw the face of the man they gave the plunder to. But never a dollar went astray in transit.

Freeman's two body-guards slept there, too. They came with him and went with him. They were never far away when as the Broadway lights began to twinkle he would loll before Brown's drug-store, in the rear of which he had a suppressed telephone. They never took their eyes off him. He never packed a gun. No punk copper or over-ambitious assistant district attorney would ever give him a bum fall like they slipped Al Capone in Philly, even when Silk Freeman owned judges and bulls, he didn't trust them.

He ran more big-time rackets in his head than all the rest of the metropolis put together. He was sure of himself. He could "lay the hip" every afternoon and float on the wings of the poppy, and he could be keener than bankers who wouldn't have lit a cigarette. He made men do what he wanted and he made women do as he pleased.

Silk Puzzled

And yet on this day, Silk Freeman didn't have himself under control.

In their graves in Chicago, Kinky King and Goldie Gorio could have told him first-hand, and 14 other tough guys, not the least of them the Edgewater Kid—the only love of Polack Annie's red-headed and red-blooded life—could have told him. But, wise as Silk Freeman was, he didn't quite yet have the answer.

He did. But he tried to laugh it off . . . In love? Silk Freeman—in love? This man who would cut your guts out and count 'em up like pinochle cards—in love? Preposterous.

But—was it? With the million-and-one matters he had to occupy him, his mind kept wandering back to Room eight-o-o, Hotel Napoleon. And what and who was there? A crimson-crowned tramp from Chicago who had eased in on him out of nowhere. She had talked up to him. She had played hard to get. He wasn't used to that. Who was this broad that she should distract the perfectly orientated noodle of Silk Freeman? Who was she?

Never mind. She was in Room eight-o-o. And he couldn't drive that out of his famous skull . . . But, then, why——

He strolled into Brown's, back to his phone, and called the number. Annie was there—because she had no other place to go. She recognized the voice.

"I'll be there in a few minutes, fire top," he said.

"I'll be in," she answered.

"Pretty up. We're goin' steppin'."

Buys New Clothing

"I haven't got much in the way of clothes. Where I came from the men treat their babies pretty, but they don't take 'em shoppin' much. I'd disgrace you."

"Downstairs is a dress joint—it's run by a blister named Imogene. I'll give her a buzz. Go down an' say Silk sent you. She'll fit you like Peggy Hopkins. And when I get there, look like Mrs. Astor's pet pup. I'll go home and tux it up.

"Imogene will hear from me," said Annie. I'll be there like a plush pony."

"So will Silk. Hop to it."

Freeman walked in on Annie. She was radiant in a light-blue semi-gown, long behind, nothing much in front, very little up in the back. Her fiery hair looked like Nero's blowout. Her lips were roughed, her cheeks were pinked, her lashes were mascarad, her dimples were deepened.

Silk Freeman had seen a few girls. He owned night clubs and girl shows; he had been raised in the ghetto, where half the professional beauties of America spring from; he was connoisseur of females.

He had heard this Polack Annie was poison. But he had heard that about a flock of twists. Now, when he blinked the eyes of his dead-pan poker face, he felt something akin to the kick of the third drag on the "stem." She was a wow, this gun-moll from the sticks. How had they held her that long in Chi?

"You look the real McCoy, Annie," he said.

"I feel lousy," she replied.

"What's the matter? Not getting enough attention?

"Oh, I ain't lookin' for attention. I haven't got any comin' to me, I guess. But I feel so strange here—so far away from everybody an' everything—oh, not that I got anybody or anything—no place—but I jus' feel like a wag—so unnecessary an' so"—

Curse Pursues

"Oh, bottle that in your good-lookin' mush. You miss those penny-ante punks you thought were big shots in Chi. You're in the big league now, red head. What they took down is tips to waiters here. You're with Silk—Silk Freeman—'B. B.'—and he kind of craves your comp'ny. Now, what are you torching over? I know a hundred broads right now'd give their souls for your spot. You came, I saw, you conquered. Another big baby pulled somethin' like that line—Julius Caesar. He was good, too. . . How about a bottle o' grape?"

Polack Annie looked him over shrewdly through half-open eyes. He was not drunk. He was vociferous, fulsome, but sober. She had heard that he went for the pipe. But she had known many who had the yen-yen. Freeman wasn't floating. He was—Annie's heart sank; he was "stuck." She had gone up against that all her life. She exercised that effect on men.

Polack Annie had no morals But she could get gooseflesh, like any other human being. What was this curse that hung over her? She had come to this amazing man to get by and go through. And here and now he was—

Annie popped little dabs of perfume at strategic points.

"Are we goin' out?" she asked. "I haven't seen much o' this here famous burg . . . by the way, you don't look bad in that tux. If you inquire discreetly, I'm good an' hungry. Let's knock off that quart o' wine an' lam it for a menu. Do I order?"

Annie called and the service was nothing to squawk about. They lapped up the vintage in fragile, hollow-stemmed shells.

"Annie," said Silk, "You make me feel like no other skirt ever did."

Thinks of Kid

"That's your hard luck," retorted Annie. "Lemme fill up your glass."

"No—oh, okay, fill it—but listen: janes are no novelty in my life. But I'm that way over you in a big way. Does that burn you up?"

Annie turned away for a second. She saw the sleek-haired Edgewater Kid—as she had first seen him in the Devil's Hall, all youth and animation, and as she had last seen him in the coffin, all waxy and embalmed, with the type-writer-bullet holes all covered by a decent black suit and no visible sign that he had been put on the spot.

"Did you say we was goin' out to eat?" she asked, pointedly.

"Sure," said Silk. "We're goin' out—to eat—an' how——"

"Well, let's be on our way," said Annie. "Where do we do this?"

"To my apartment—after we have dinner at Lefty's . . . pull on the little hat, fire top . . . this is goin' to be a party."

Polack Annie hesitated. Then, lackadaisically, she slid on her silver toque like sliding the skin over a sausage. The effect against her hair and coloring was glorious.

"Oh—okay," she agreed. "Do we breeze?"

"What do you mean, breeze?" demanded Silk Freeman. "You're goin' to my dump."

"Well, I'm goin'—what more do you want?"

"I'll let you know when we get there."

"Maybe I can guess. Anyway, Big Boy, I'm movin' on my own power. Let's lam."

Silk Freeman fumbled for his hat.

THE QUEST FOR BEAUTY -:- -:-

Drawn by NELL BRINKLEY

Who wants Beauty—and who's chasing her? Why practically everybody. All the way from the girl old enough to peruse the pages of magazines—a mere baby in a blue sash if she had lived a hundred years ago—to the most sensible and life-disciplined old gentleman you can think of. She believes that without Beauty life is a plain sort of thing. He hates secretly to grow old—and likes the boy-face he once had much better than this old one he has now. Beautyitis is a complaint the world always had—and always will have—and has now just about as bad as a thing can be had. Strange—in a hard-headed age to suffer so from the ache of oh-to-be-beautiful! On our knees to Beauty in the racket of rock-drills and riveters, subway blasts and taxi "peemp-peemps." Demanding of the business woman that she have Beauty as well as the brains she's shown us. Praying to acquire Beauty along with the power to earn a living!

Look at the "ads" in any lowly or lofty magazine—Beauty-Worship on every page; and all through the inside stuffing, too. Not Prettiness are we building bon-fires to. But real Beauty. Though we be plastered with all the colors of the cosmetic rainbow—it is still, and more than ever, REAL beauty that we hope for. HOW TO BE! Can anybody tell us? Everybody is trying to tell us—if we believe the printed page.

Sally, who's not so bad herself—her Dad thinks she's man-fatal as she is—writes to Greta Garbo, the sonorous, siren Swede, saying, "Dear Miss Garbo, please tell me how to be beautiful—you are, so you must know!" If Frokin Greta could, I'm sure the Swedish frost-flower would!

Suzanne reads the Beauty columns—the positive and elaborate details on how to turn the trick—by ladies who are suspiciously plain—"if that picture is them!" When her friends look at her, Suzanne seems to look just about the same as before.

Sylvia believes in the table-trick. "It's what you eat," says Sylvia. One pea on a fork is the limit of her starch indulgence. Spinach, carrots raw, an apple a day, milk and no meat.

Sybil goes straight to the Doctor-man. "Beauty begins in the middle of me," says Sybil, "and I'll have it out. The medico is the Beauty-Doctor for me."

Sadie's effort is the butter-in-a-hot-oven idea. "Suffer it off," says Sadie, whose harrier to Beauty is size. Rubber jacket, heat-infernal, ice on her head, ice-water in hand—the torrid road to Beauty.

Suzette falls for the glittering gadgets. "Dew of the Fountain of Youth"—oh, joy, what lovely looking stuff. It says a skin like a gardenia overnight. You go to bed an Ugly Duckling—and you wake up a Swan. You go to sleep a plain puss with the whole world just seeing through you because they don't know you are there, and you wake up dated for a year! What's in this duck of a green bottle? It looks divine—" Suzette is going to work from the outside in.

Suzette, Sadie, Sybil and Sylvia, Suzanne and Sally dear, all bitten by the gorgeous, glittering gadfly Beauty. As also Gran'ma, ole Bill, Miss Mifflin and the rest.

What is your name? Does it begin with an S? Or are you one of the four last named? Sure you want to be beautiful, too!

—NELL BRINKLEY.

Love's Reawakening -:- Continuation of Love's Awakening

By ADELE GARRISON

Helena Brixton and Son Arrive to Plead Party Cause

"O-h-h," Marion exclaimed at her stepfather's repetition of the telephone operator's announcement that Mrs. Brixton and Mr. Ronald Brixton were calling. "Where can I go? I can't see them this way! I look a fright."

"We understand your dilemma," her stepfather told her gravely, "and allee samee the walrus, we deeply sympathize, but beyond that—"

"We can do something more than that, Marion," I said, catching up her bags. "Come into your own room—it's time Mary was awake anyway—and you can fuss as much as you wish."

The door of her room had barely closed upon us before she had caught me in a bear hug.

"Oh, you are such a good egg, Auntie Madge," she exclaimed.

"Hello, Marion!" Mary raised herself upon one languid elbow. "When did you blow in? Thought you weren't due till tomorrow. Hope you don't mind my staking off your bed. Your mother and Auntie Madge are to blame. They penned me up in here."

"She doesn't mind and she'll explain later," I said crisply. "Just now, Mary, you have an assignment—to see that she hurries through her beauty course and gets back into the other room. We have guests, Mrs. Brixton and her son."

"What!" Mary scrambled out of bed as if galvanized. "The one and only Yale boy friend? Don't you lose any time, sister. Here, sit down. I'm the best ladies' maid ever invented. Run along, Auntie Madge, and wash your dishes. I'll turn this young woman back into the other room before you know she's left it."

With Marion's embarrassed giggles following me, I returned to the living room to find Lillian and Mrs. Brixton greeting each other.

"Oh! Mrs. Graham!" Helena Brixton's beautifully modulated voice addressed me. "Please help me to make my peace with Lillian. I really did not mean to kidnap her child. But indeed, I find that hers has returned, while mine is still lost in the wilds of the shopping district. Lucky she has Charlie with her. He always takes such wonderful care of her. There are few uncles so devoted."

"I do not think you need to worry about Carolyn," I told her with a smile. "Mr. Owen was taking care of her most effectively. Her only discomfort appeared to lie in a fear that Marion might not be able to come to the party tonight."

Ronald took a step forward with a smothered little exclamation of dismay which his mother echoed as she turned back to Lillian.

"Oh, you couldn't punish me that way, Lillian," she said, and there was in her voice the seductive quality—also in Carolyn's — possessed by certain women dubbed by the old housewives as being "able to coax the birds off the bushes."

Lillian suddenly smiled at her—she had not been smiling when I entered the room.

"The same old Helena," she said. "Do you remember how you used to get 'round the teacher?"

Mrs. Brixton returned the affectionate, comradely glance, seen only in its perfection between two old school friends.

"What I'm worrying about now is whether I shall be able to get around you," she said frankly, and Lillian laughed, but Ronald's young face was tense and unsmiling.

The Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

Mrs. Solomon Says—

Hear now, the Miserere of A Cynic, which is Mrs. Solomon's.

For we may struggle against our enemies and defeat them, but in the hands of our friends we are defenseless as shorn lambs, and softer than cream-puffs.

* * *

Lo, our enemies may look upon us as vipers and scoundrels and sinners.

But our friends regard us tenderly as weaklings and easy marks.

Our enemies may suspect us of evil, and declare that we are full of craftiness and deceit and artfulness.

* * *

But our friends regard us as harmless morons and treat us as candidates for the Home for the Feeble-Minded, while they cover us with "advice" and admonitions.

* * *

Our enemies may seek to know our secrets and exult at the skeletons which they discover within our closets.

But our friends already KNOW our secrets and have BROADCAST them.

Our enemies may suspect that we camouflage our age, and that the color of our hair is not as God and Nature made it in the beginning.

* * *

But our friends know the date of our birth, and the brand of our hair dye is written in their memory.

* * *

Our enemies may long to stab us in the back—but our friends strike us in the face, with "the honest truth." Yea, for our "own good" they tell us all those things which we seek to forget.

* * *

Our enemies may fill us with wormwood and gall and the yearning for a fight.

But our friends fill us with an inferiority complex!

Our enemies may turn away their faces and snub us before the multitude. Yea, they may shut their doors against us and scorn to enter our portals.

But our friends "drop in" in the MORNING, when our faces are covered with the clay-pack and all the beds are unmade. Yea, they drop in, saying, "Don't mind ME!" And we are covered with shame—and smiles of welcome.

Our enemies may threaten us, But our friends persuade us; yea, they bully us and coerce us into ways of foolishness—and then blame us for our folly.

Our enemies may seek out many inventions to rob us for our moneys and despoil us of our riches. But our friends "borrow" our hard-earned shekels—and forget to return them.

* * *

Verily, verily, our enemies may long to destroy us—but only our friends can DO it! SELAH.

Horoscopes

Sunday, November 9

Sunday's horoscope is not a very important one, excepting that affairs of church, clergy and charity may move into progressive groves. The frame of mind may not be a happy one, leaning toward criticism, sarcasm, irritability and bickering.

Those whose birthday it is may enjoy a fairly prosperious year, with some success and advancement, but there must be a determination not to let disputes, turbulences and sarcastic speech mar these prospects.

A child born on this day may be fairly prosperous and progressive, but should not imperil its prospects by indulging in rash and hasty conduct and sarcastic speech. With care it may win out by diplomacy and shrewdness and aggressiveness.

Monday, November 10

Monday's astrological map holds figures that must be read as portentous. There is a sign of sudden and precipitate disruption and disintegration, with change, delays and disappointments, but attended by some astral assistance in the way of establishing new enterprises, especially by methods of subtlety and secret arrangements rather than by open agreements.

Those whose birthday it is may have a year calling for much fortitude and clever management of the affairs, which seem to be beset by sudden dangers and disruption unless a firm hand and a wise head be in control.

A child born on this day may be resourceful, aggressive and adventurous, although re tless and wilful.

Tell It to Sally

By SALLY MARTIN

Does a Girl Have to Pet Her Way to Popularity?

Are the boys to blame?

And if the girls don't Get Warm, do they leave 'em Cold?

Bonnie said they were . . . and would.

She assured us that she wanted to be a sweet, modest little flower . . . but when she tried it, she was left with nothing but empty air to talk to.

That idea gave Jack a pain.

"That Bonnie who wrote to you about the Terrible Modern Boy is all wet!" he snorts. "She apparently thinks that every girl has to neck with every date she goes out with, in order to be popular. Well, let me put in a word about that, will you? I am as modern as any other fellow of 19, and here's my slant on these girls.

"They wouldn't smoke if they didn't think they were being 'smart.' They drink because other girls do. They neck with any and every fellow, for the same reason.

"Boys don't force girls to do these things. All they've got to do is to say 'No,' and any decent boy will respect them for it. What I'd like to find, and there are lots like me . . . is a decent girl, with the spunk to stay decent."

That's hitting straight from the shoulder. And Ann backs it up.

"In plain American," says she, "that Bonnie is a sap. I consider myself as popular as the average young girl who is fairly good-looking. I always have dates, and nice ones, too. I have seen almost everything that any modern, peppy girl would like to see. I've been to every good show and movie that's come along, for ages. I've been to every new night club.

"And as to the kind of men I go with—well, I know several of my friends (female), who would adore being seen with them. And I neither drink, smoke nor pet. I never have, and I never will. Yet I am never left alone.

"As for Bonnie's idea that the girl is not to blame for petting—well, she certainly is wrong . . . in lots of cases at least. I am a girl, and proud of it, but I am afraid that some of you girls are to blame. They lead a man on, until he starts something. And then they are so shocked and so surprised! Naturally, all the fellows aren't angels, any more than all the girls are. But I am sure that Bonnie will do a lot better if she snaps out of it."

"I wonder if she is careful to look neat and spiffy? I wonder if she reads? I wonder if she talks . . . not too much . . . but well? Does she make snippy remarks about 'naughty boys' and about how 'nice' she is? She should look herself over, and quit blaming her troubles on sex. That's ridiculous."

But Marjorie tells a different story.

"Bonnie is right," she exclaims.

"I have been going out with fellows since I was about 16. I am 18 now. And up until a short time ago, I had a date for almost every night in the week, and with some of the nicest fellows there are. But there has always been one thing I wouldn't stand for, and that was necking.

"Now I find myself with about one date a week. Some of the girls don't fuss about it. They'll neck with anyone for the sake of 'going out.' But for me, that is impossible. So I stay at home. Do you think I'm in the wrong? Has a fellow a right to expect to neck a girl, because he has taken her out . . . and to get ugly and sarcastic when she won't let him? A lot of them seem to think so. My opinion is that at least 80 out of every 100 boys expect too much for their company.

"And so long as the majority of them do make such demands, there will be a lot of girls who fall for their stuff. Bonnie is right though, that if the girls would be compelled to act human, in order not to be ostracised, and a little of the cold shoulder would do some of them worlds of good, and make this world easier to live in."

There are the two sides of the question. . . .

What's the answer? If you have one, let's hear it.

CORRECT MANNERS

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Never a Hope Chest Shower

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Is it proper for any one to give a young girl a linen shower or a shower of any kind for her hope chest? The girl is not engaged, but has been going about with a young man steadily for a year. THELMA.

This would not be at all in good taste. In fact, it would look most inappropriate and certainly as if much were being taken for granted in her friendship with the young man. Much, too much, I should say.

A Tardy Note

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have learned through a mutual friend that a very dear friend of mine (a teacher with whom I was very intimate at high school) was married about three months ago. I would like to know whether it would be proper to send her a letter of congratulation? B. M.

She'd love such a friendly letter—by all means send it. It would be correct and sweet-thoughted and most appropriate.

WORKS BUREAU SAVES COUNTY MILLIONS

Creation of Department Eliminated Excessive Costs, Welded Units

By JAMES B. SANSOM,
Secretary, Allegheny County Planning Commission.

For the planning and construction of nearly $80,000,000 worth of public improvements within seven years, the Board of County Commissioners of Allegheny County found it necessary to create a Department of Public Works which would combine all of the construction and maintenance activities of the county under one organization, which has efficiently and economically gone about the great task that has confronted it and has saved the county millions of dollars and made possible the construction of the great county improvement program within a reasonable time.

Outside engineers and architects who collected hundreds of thousands of dollars each year for the planning and supervising of roads, tunnels, bridges and buildings, are now unnecessary, and the units of the county government which formerly functioned independently and at an excessive overhead cost to the public treasury, have been welded into and made an integral part of the great organization which has been set up under Director Norman F. Brown, of the Department of Public Works.

The scheme of organization under the county commissioners provides first a director of public works with an assistant and a general office division directly under which are the other units of the organization which are responsible to the director, with the single exception of the Planning Commission, which is composed of nine prominent citizens, who serve without any compensation in passing upon the advisability, location and general character of suggested public improvements and also study and pass upon lot plans in the townships.

COUNTY PARK SYSTEM

It was to the County Planning Commission that Commissioner E. V. Babcock first made public his dream of the county park system, which promises to develop into one of the greatest recreational projects ever inaugurated by a municipality or county in this country. The development of the county park idea was made possible by the foresight of Commissioner Babcock in optioning the necessary land as a private citizen before making public his plan and the county has been saved untold expense in the initial cost of these two great projects. Chairman Joseph G. Armstrong upheld and supported Commissioner Babcock in the county park project and has given every aid to its development.

Director Brown, who heads the activities of the Department of Public Works, has attained a national reputation through his success as a constructive executive, and his assistant, W. H. R. Kreiling, has been with the county in responsible engineering posts for a number of years and by his record and experience has qualified himself for the supervision of the details of departmental work. Charles Mazon, as office manager of the department, has successfully directed a large and mobile force of clerks, stenographers and accountants.

OFFICE DIVISION

In the general office division of the Department of Public Works are three divisions, including the division of statistics and publicity, which gathers statistical data on cost and source of revenue, handles the technical library and checks departmental efficiency and is headed by Chief Statistician Joseph White, who through articles in the technical magazines and the writing of books has gained recognition from engineering authorities. The division of investigations, claims and reports under the direction of W. A. Reppermund, division engineer, makes investigations and reports on all complaints for damages, secures waivers, makes estimates of damages and handles the workmen's compensation feature in the department. The work of Mr. Reppermund for the county has won commendation from those who have studied his progress in the difficult and complicated field of his activity. The division of contracts which takes care of the clerical preparation of contracts for construction work and materials and the preparation of current estimates is headed by Contract Clerk Frank R. Forrest, who has handled county contract details with efficiency for many years.

MOVING, TURNING 9-STORY BUILDING

HOW NINE-STORY BUILDING WAS MOVED FROM LEFT, QUARTER TURNED, SET AT RIGHT

This 100'x135' building, 12,000 tons, conducted business as usual, with lights, heat, telephones and 650 employes uninterrupted as the John Eichleay, Jr., Company, of Pittsburgh, moved it. Contents and equipment are valued at $2,000,000 and the feat is hailed as the biggest moving task ever accomplished. The building's standing in Indianapolis, Ind.

HOUSE MOVERS HAVE UNIQUE RECORD

Eichleays of Pittsburgh Moved Indianapolis Telephone Building

For over 50 years the Eichleays of Pittsburgh have been achieving the impossible in house moving, simply by following the blief that "it can be done" and then going ahead and finding a way to do it. The business was founded by their father, a Yankee contractor of the old school, who in connection with his other interests had always done house moving in a limited way. Since the death of the father some time ago, the business has been carried on by the sons, John, Jr., Harry, Roy and Walter.

House moving is but one department of the Eichleay's business, which embraces steel construction; shoring and foundation work, the building of huge steel derricks and the fabrication, assembling, launching and repairing of all kinds of river craft. The house moving department, however, is virtually a business in itself, with from 300 to 500 men constantly on its payroll. They move from 200 to 300 buildings annually. Altogether they have moved more than 10,000 structures, including oil tanks, high chimneys, stranded ships and bridges. This work has been done in all parts of the United States.

SECRET OF MOVING

The main secret of the work lies in giving proper support to the building to replace that of the foundation on which it stood. It is not feasible to move the old foundation; therefore, a new, temporary foundation must be provided on which the structure may rest while it is in motion. When slipped horizontally under the building, the beams or girders provides the walls with this needed temporary support. Properly placed, they make it impossible to make it sag at any place.

Among some of the most difficult jobs undertaken are: the moving of 50 detached dwellings at Charleston, W. Va., to make room for the State Capitol. Twelve houses had to be taken across the Kanawha River, two being transported each trip. The houses were moved 225 feet on a trestle in the journey from their foundations to the platform of cribbing on the barges; an eight story Pittsburgh office building, weighing 5,000 tons, was lifted 12 inches by 1,200 jacks working simultaneously, and then was moved back 40 feet to a new foundation, which had already been prepared for it.

OUTSTANDING FEAT

By far, the largest building moving feat ever accomplished is the moving of the Central General Office Building of the Indiana Bell Telephone Company, Meridian street and New York avenue, Indianapolis, Ind. This building is a nine story building, 100'x135', containing three passenger elevators, 650 employes and weighs 12,000 tons. The building before moving, fronted on Meridian street. It was quarter-turned so as to front on New York avenue and moved to the rear to make room for a new 30 story building which is to be erected at once on the site formerly occupied by the Telephone Building. This moving was done without interruption to any department, including the telephone exchange. The contents of the building in equipment is valued in excess of $2,000,000.00.

STEEL OUTPUT TO DECLINE FURTHER

Production During Week Down to 46 Per Cent; No Decrease in Prices

B. E. V. LUTY

When there is an autumn increase in steel demand it begins in August and it usually starts tapering off by late October. This year there was a mere shadow of an increase, August showing slightly heavier production than July, September bringing a decrease. It is a fair assumption that the seasonal influence was present but was offset by further decrease in general business activity.

By this date the seasonal trend in steel, according to precedent, would be downward, and this would continue to the end of the year, being followed by a distinct upturn immediately after January 1. It is not surprising, therefore, that steel production is now engaged in decreasing in somewhat marked fashion.

From August to September there was a decrease of 7.3 per cent in the rate of steel ingot production, and from September to October a decrease of 8.7 per cent. Practically every week since the end of August production has dropped one point or more.

OCTOBER AVERAGE

The September average, according to the official report, was 55.10 per cent of capacity, as ascertained for the beginning of this year, while the October average was 50.32 per cent. As the slipping has been somewhat greater in the last two or three weeks, it is safe to estimate that the rate in the week now ending has been around 45 or 46 per cent. Undoubtedly there will be further decreases to the end of the year unless something unexpected develops.

This is indicated both by the diminishing pace of buying at the present time and by seasonal precedent. A decrease occurs from the double influence of the advent of winter, curtailing consumption in some directions, and of preparation for January 1 inventory, buyers of both steel and steel manufacturers rigidly reducing their stocks. How much further decrease there will be is problematical, for while, on the one hand, curtailment of stocks will be particularly vigorous, on the other hand, there has been much curtailment already. There will be no precise showing of the rate at the close of the year on account of Christmas coming on Thursday, thus breaking the week. Some departments may be closed for the entire week.

SMALL DECREASE

On the basis of the 45 to 46 per cent estimate for this week, total production of all steel ingots would be around 92,000 tons per working day, or 28,500,000 tons a year. That is 52 per cent of last year's production, 54,850,000 tons. The first half of this year was only 18 per cent under the first half of last year.

The small decrease did not properly reflect the fundamental state of general trade for adverse influences had not fully worked out. In a recession there is what may be called a descending spiral, some momentum being left over from the previous activity, the momentum being gradually lost.

YEAR'S OUTPUT

The half year's production will be in the neighborhood of 16,000,000 tons, two-thirds of the first half, which ran 24,000,000 tons, and making in the neighborhood of 40,000,000 tons for the year.

Finished steel prices are undergoing very little test at the present time, orders being small individually and subject to little negotiation. Prices in various lines are not altogether steady. Some producers are holding quite rigidly while others, chiefly small producers, are cutting rather regularly. It can hardly be said that prices are engaged in declining farther.

Mergers of Chains and Packers Possible

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

CONSOLIDATION OF FOOD companies to form organizations far greater than those in existence at present are seen as a possibility if the meat packers are successful in having the consent decree modified.

The packers' consent decree is an agreement made between the United States government and the "big five" meat packers in 1920. To avoid action against them by the Federal Trade Commission, the packers agreed to dispose of their interests in companies handling products not directly related to the meat industry and to refrain from engaging in retail distribution. Interests in stock yards and other activities were also banned.

As a result of this Swift & Co., segregated its fruit and vegetable canning business into a company known as Libby, McNeil and Libby. Similar steps were taken by other packers. The agreement was made by Armour, Morris, Swift, Wilson and Cudahy. The merger of Armour and Morris has since reduced the "big five" of the industry to the "big four."

Seeking Modification

ARMOUR AND SWIFT are now engaged in a suit before the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia in which they are attempting to have the decree modified to permit them to sell at retail and to distribute foods which are not related to meat or its by-products.

The success of the large chains of grocery stores in marketing meats has had much to do with the desire of the packers to enter the retail field. The packing business is conducted on an exceedingly small margin of profit. For a large part of each year operations are at a loss. The development of retail sales would provide a new source of profit which would give greater stability to the packers' earnings. In order to compete successfully with the retail chains, liberty to handle other products than meats would have to be obtained.

Fear Chain Power

WITHIN A SHORT space of time the chain stores have become the packers' biggest customers. They are so large, however, that the packers are understood to view them with considerable misgiving. The chains may reach a place where they can dictate prices through controlling too large a part of the packers' markets.

Besides there is always the danger that the large chains may enter the packing business on their own account. Where the chains have highly concentrated distribution it would be logical for them to prepare their own meats. This would be a severe blow to the established packers since the original retail outlets undoubtedly have been reduced by chain competition.

Mergers or Modification

IF THE CONSENT DECREE is allowed to stand in its original form the packers will be at a serious disadvantage. They cannot sell any foods but meats and they cannot open retail stores but there are no restrictions against the chain stores operating packing plants and leaving the "big four" high and dry.

If the restrictions are removed, however, the packers can use their enormous resources to protect their position. They can open chains of their own to insure against the loss of markets. They will have the same advantages as the chains.

The logical outcome of this competition being made possible, would quite likely be consolidations of national chains of stores with large packing companies. Atlantic and Pacific, Kroger or one of the other chains would undoubtedly find alliances with Armour or Swift highly advantageous. Changes in the consent decree would make such mergers possible. There is little doubt that the food companies are watching the outcome of the case with this in mind.

RAILS REPORT INCOME OFF

Class I railroads of the United States for the first nine months this year had a net railway operating income of $659,427,561, which was at the annual rate of return of 3.54 per cent on their property investment, according to reports filed by the carriers with the Bureau of Railway Economics. In the nine months of 1929, their net railway operating income was $962,854,453, of 5.29 per cent on their property investment.

This compilation as to earnings for the nine months of 1930 is based on reports from 17 Class I railroads representing a total of 242,609 miles.

Gross operating revenues for the first nine months of 1930 totaled $4,082,725,729, compared with $4,781,684,238 for the same period last year or a decrease of 14.6 per cent. Operating expenses for the first nine months of 1930 amounted to $3,052,543,100, compared with $3,419,397,035 for the same period one year ago, a decrease of 10.7 per cent.

California Standard To Buy Air Firm

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 8.—Standard Oil Company of California is likely shortly to announce acquisition of controlling interest in Air Ferries, Ltd., operating a plane service between San Francisco, Oakland and Vallejo. It is understood that the oil company, which was a stockholder in the Air Ferries Company from its inception last year, acquired the control of the concern several months ago and plans to continue its operation.

Gold Imports Show Gain for October

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—Despite renewal of shipments of gold to Canada in the last few days of the month, gold movements in October at New York and San Francisco resulted in a net gain of $16,934,000. Imports amounted to $32,154,000 and exports $15,220,000. On the import side, receipt of $15,000,000 from Brazil in a single shipment was the feature of the month and definitely turned the balance to a substantial gain. October showed the largest import balance since May, when imports exceeded exports by $17,770,000.

Extra Checks Announced For Stockholders

By B. C. FORBES

EXTRA CHRISTMAS dividends are beginning encouragingly. Sentiment and trade could be greatly helped were all companies having adequate earnings and surpluses to make special distributions to stockholders between now and New Year. Such action might prove the spark necessary to explode the all-pervading gloom.

Mr. Forbes.

Honorable mention for declaring extra dividends is due the directors of Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Company, who have declared 25 cents extra on the common stock, payable December 1; Vacuum Oil Company directors, who also announced 25 cents extra; Standard Oil of California directors, who are to distribute a special stock dividend of 2 per cent, payable December 15; Imperial Oil, Ltd. (Canada) directors, who announce 50 cents a share from "surplus earnings from investments abroad;" Standard Oil of New Jersey directors who have declared their "usual extra" of 25 cents; Federal Light and Traction directors who are to distribute a special dividend of 1 per cent payable in common stock; Parker Rustproof Company directors who are to pay on November 20 an extra dividend of $1 on its common stock. Who will be next?

LEE A. PHILLIPS, dynamic Californian financier at the head of half a score of enterprises, who is now in New York, asked me:

"Why don't you advocate that the income tax authorities announce that, in order to encourage helping the unemployed, corporations be allowed to make contributions to community chests or unemployment funds and be allowed to deduct such contributions from their taxable profits? If this is done," he added, "you will see a response which will gratify the country."

This suggestion is recommended to President Hoover and Secretary Mellon for immediate action. The government did not hesitate during the war to allow corporation directors to declare dividends for the benefit of the Red Cross. This country has a war on its hands at this moment, a war quite as deserving of financial support by corporations as the last war. The present war against unemployment and its attendant untold hardships should be waged as aggressively as we waged war in Europe.

Let this suggestion by Mr. Phillips be taken up enthusiastically by humane corporation directors all over the country, first, by urging Washington to act, and then by exercising the utmost possible generosity in making contributions.

This is no time for "capital" to sit smugly indifferent to the sufferings of the millions who have become unfortunate victims of our "capitalistic" system. The attitude among the rank and file of the people throughout the country is less cordial toward our financial, industrial and other leaders than it has been at any time in recent years. Unless effective action be taken, we may run in another era of political big stock swashbucklerism, with the consequence very unpleasant to contemplate.

USUALLY IT is a relief these days to get away from New York and visit other cities, so abjectly pessimistic is the financial center of America. This week I had the privilege of addressing the Manufacturers' Club of Philadelphia, an organization comprising 2,500 responsible citizens. The impression derived from various conversations was that Philadelphia was also sentimentally in the doldrums.

There is one difference, however, between the two cities. In New York almost every man you meet takes a doleful view of the future and expresses helplessness. In Philadelphia, while they confess that conditions are very unsatisfactory at the moment, a distinctly less hopeless attitude is taken towards the future. There they express eagerness to be up and doing.

The feeling in Philadelphia is that, if the New York Stock Exchange would only start registering returning confidence, the whole complexion of affairs could change over night. Certainly, good securities are now available at bargain prices. By and by many people will look back upon the present opportunity and bewail their failure to invest every dollar at their command. The term "investing" is not to be interpreted as meaning speculating on thin margins. That is always dangerous.

WOULDN'T NOW be an ideal time for John J. Raskob to launch the super-colossal investment company he propounded a long time ago? Surely he and other capitalists could pick stocks almost certain to sell at much higher prices a year or two from now. Every now and again the writer receives inquiries, but thus far Mr. Raskob has taken no definite action.

A DEADLOCK IN Congress would start no flood of tears in Wall Street. Finance, industry, utilities, etc., would prefer being left alone for awhile by the politicians. Anyway, the newly-elected lawmakers don't begin to function for more than twelve months. If Wall Street had nothing nearer at hand to worry over, a boom would begin instanter.

OUR CHEERFUL ITEM: President J. J. O'Brien of Standard Gas & Electric, reports an increase of $1,158,026 in combined net earnings of all Byllesby companies, for the year ended September 30.

Another: President C. O. Miniger, of Electric Auto-Lite, announcing earnings covering all dividend requirements for the last nine months, tells stockholders. "We at this time see no reason why the regular $1.50 December 31 dividend should not be paid." He believes that 1931 will exceed 1930.

"Happy days are here again," says the now-popular song. They're not—but happy days WILL come again.

Manager

B. C. CHANDLER

Mr. Chandler, manager of Pittsburgh Thrift Corporation, which has developed three plans to meet requirements of persons needing small loans.

PLAN DEVISED FOR SMALL LOANS

Three Methods Provide Easy Payment Plan To Small Borrowers

The Pittsburgh Thrift plan of small loans was devised to make payment easy from small to average incomes. It includes three different methods of loan, so that any borrower may find a plan adapted to his particular needs and circumstances. Each method carries a lower interest charge than any similar method used by other loan companies. Up to $300 may be loaned.

If the customer can put up as collateral bonds or stock in any well rated company, he can borrow on his own signature. He need not own real estate and no indorsers are required. This class of loan was devised especially for small investors, who through this plan are enabled to acquire valuable securities easily and conveniently. By the investment loan plan, if all payments are made promptly, $100, repayable in 10 monthly installments, costs only $8.25; repayable in 15 monthly installments, $12, and, repayable in 20 monthly installments, $15.80. The borrower receives all dividends paid on pledged securities.

REAL ESTATE LOANS

Endorsement and real estate loans also are made for periods of 10 and 20 months. The customer pays the principal back in 10 or 20 equal installments, with interest on unpaid balances. Large cash discounts, deducted at time of payment, are allowed for punctual payment. Under this plan, if all payments are made on due date, a $100 loan, repayable in 10 monthly installments, costs $12.35; repayable in 20 monthly installments, $23.55.

If the customer owns real estate, or has a reasonable equity in it, he can borrow on his own signature only. No collateral or indorsements are required. If the customer has no real estate, or has only a small equity, he can borrow with the indorsement of one or two reputable persons.

PAYS FIXED SUM

Loans in this class are repayable in weekly, bi-weekly or monthly payments, spread out over a period of 56 weeks. The borrower pays a fixed sum per week, which includes both interest and payment on principal. There are no fees or extras of any sort. On the contrary for every week on which payment has been made on the due date, a refund is credited to the borrower's account and at the last payment he receives a check for all the refunds earned.

The Pittsburgh Thrift Corporation has also a 20-month plan for real estate and indorsement loans, with special cash discounts for prompt payments.

In any of these classes, when the loan is made, the borrower receives the entire amount of his loan, without any deductions or discounts whatsoever.

LOCAL BRIDGE FIRM GETS BIG ORDER

Nearly 20,000 Feet of New Railing to Be Installed On McKees Rocks Span

Orders for 20,000 feet of the recently developed Hunter safety railing are on the books of the Independent Bridge Company. This material is to be erected within the next six months. A major share of it will be installed on the new McKees Rocks Bridge being built by Allegheny County. The unfilled orders are in addition to thousands of feet of the new rail which have been supplied to Allegheny County and the City of Pittsburgh during the past year.

Hunter Safety Railing represents a radical departure in design which conforms to the changed traffic conditions of the present day. In the past railings were used solely to keep pedestrians from falling from bridges and viaducts. The longitudinal members were expected to carry only a moderate strain which was taken up by posts at the end of each panel.

ADDS TO SAFETY

But high speed automobiles have made it necessary to provide a fence with greatly increased strength. The Independent Bridge Company has designed a railing with a third horizontal member placed at a height to take the impact of the bumper or wheels of a motor vehicle and which will cause it to skid along the fence. This puts less of a strain on the posts since the impact is received nearer to the base of the posts and the leverage action is smaller.

To further strengthen the railing, the horizontal members are constructed so that they form a continuous cable. In the event that one post is badly bent or is broken from the principal structure the other posts will take up the shock.

STEEL EXPORTS TAKE DROP

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—The September export trade of the United States in iron and steel products declined to 131,211 gross tons as compared with 151,235 gross tons in September, 1929, Commerce Department reports.

The foreign trade of the United States in iron and steel for the first nine months of 1930 totaled 1,639,219 gross tons as compared with 2,342,361 gross tons in the 1929 corresponding period. Canada was the month's largest market—its 66,448-ton total being 50.5 per cent of the September trade.

Imports of iron and steel products totaled 40,285 tons in September against 35,387 in August and 61,245 tons in September, 1929. During the nine months ended with September, 1930, imports of these products totaled 396,194 tons as compared with 586,582 tons in the 1929 period.

Director

VINCENT B. COFFIN

SALES COURSE GIVEN HERE

Within five years the life insurance salesman without a chartered life underwriters degree will occupy much the same position as the physician who tries to practice his profession without a medical degree, in the opinion of Vincent B. Coffin, educational director of the Penn Mutual Life Insurance Company, who is in Pittsburgh conducting a training course for the salesmen in the local office.

The Pittsburgh course is one of those being held in the company's nation-wide program to educate salesmen and equip them for the coveted degree.

Mr. Coffin believes that the degree will be awarded to thousands in the course of the next few years and that a life insurance salesman without this degree will have little standing. He basis his prediction on the fact that the life insurance agent in addition to becoming a better salesman, is more and more becoming an advisor on financial matters and must be suitably equipped if he is to make the most of these new responsibilities.

In the conducting of the local school, Coffin is assisted by James A. Preston, of the educational staff of the home office, and John Laffin, educational director of the local office.

MANNELLA GETS ROAD CONTRACT

Mike Mannella Construction Company was awarded a contract amounting to $240,708 on the Flaugherty Run road, to be concrete construction, running from Glennwillette road, connecting with the Lincoln Highway.

The Mannella Construction Company was organized by Mr. Mannella and M. D. Swartz, and the first job this new company obtained was that of reflooring the Point Bridge for the city. Shortly after this a contract for the reflooring of the New Kensington Bridge was secured. For the next two years the company was employed on installing underground conduit for the Bell Telephone Company.

In 1917 Mr. Mannella bought out the interests of Mr. Swartz and obtained complete control of the company. Mr. Mannella's success on various types of construction has made him one of Pittsburgh's largest contractors.

In 1927 Mr. Mannella started the West Penn Sand and Gravel Company of Rochester, Pa., at a cost of $250,000. This company has an important source of supply to the construction company.

LOCAL TRADE SITUATION GLOOMY

Volume of Business Well Below Normal; Soft Coal Production Takes Jump

While seasonal improvement in some lines of business is noted, the situation as a whole shows but little change from that prevailing last week, according to R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review. Volume of business continues well below normal. Extensive advertising by the leading stores has increased sales at retail, but the smaller stores complain of lack of business, and jobbers of men's and women's wearing apparel, furnishing goods and shoes, report buying still light and principally for filling in purposes.

The demand for jewelry is showing a slight improvement with the approach of the holidays, but demand is principally for novelties and moderate-priced merchandise. While building permits in the city for the month of October totaled about $100,000 more than in September, the total is less than half of that for October, 1929, being $806,088 compared with $2,047,677, and the demand for building materials continues quiet. Demand for groceries and provisions, also confectionery, shows a moderate increase, with prices averaging lower than last year at this time.

OIL PRICES REDUCED

Demand for plumbing supplies and heating equipment is well below normal and no improvement is expected during the balance of the year. Demand for electrical equipment is still rather slow, and the electrical fixtures are particularly slow of movement. Production of crude oil is showing a further reduction, and demand for refined products is at a still lower rate. Prices paid for crude oil have been reduced in many cases and another cut in Pennsylvania crude oil has brought the price to the lowest point since November, 1915. The output of bituminous coal has been increased to above 10,000,000 tons per week for the first time since February, but continues considerably lower than last year at this time.

There has been little if any improvement in the collection situation locally, and jobbers complain that collections are slow.

Suspends Trading In Cities Service

BOSTON, Nov. 8.—Trading in Cities Service stock in the Boston Stock Exchange was suspended for five minutes yesterday when a rush of orders made it necessary that a halt be called to permit separation of the orders for execution.

Officials of the stock exchange said the suspension had "no significance" and was merely a "mechanical" situation. The suspension here, they said, followed a similar halt in the New York exchange for the same reason. The orders here are handled by one man, officials said, and the rush overwhelmed him.

Golden Anniversary Observed by Couple

Mr. and Mrs. John W. Coward, Sr., were celebrating their golden wedding anniversary today in their home, 245 Albert street, Mt. Washington. The celebration will culminate this evening with a dinner attended by four score friends and relatives. The Cowards, both of whom are 70, were married in Pittsburgh in 1880. They have five sons and three daughters.

Prairie to Curb Crude Oil Runs

INDEPENDENCE, Kan., Nov. 8.—Proration of crude oil runs will be extended throughout Kansas November 10 by the Prairie Oil and Gas Company. The company announced it would purchase on the marginal basis of five barrels per well per lease and 50 per cent of the remaining production, except in the Voshel, Wright, Ritz and Schurr-Raymond pools, where present proration will be tightened.

STOCK MARKET SLIDES OFF AT START

List Rallies in Spots, But Main Trend Still Lower; Radio Makes Low

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—(AP.)—The stock market rallied in spots at the opening today, but the majority of shares still worked lower. U. S. Steel, Westinghouse Electric and United Aircraft each recovered 1 point and Gillette moved up 1½. American Telephone, Columbia Gas and Pennsylvania Railroad each lost a point. Woolworth and Eastman ¾, and Radio Corp. sagged ⅝ to 16½, a new low. Westinghouse quickly lost its rise.

RADIO PROFITS TAKE DROP

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—(AP.)—The Radio Corporation of America reported net earnings of $365,654 in the third quarter of 1930, against $8,729,389 in a like period in 1929.

While the net profit in the quarter was $935,846 less than requirements for preferred dividends, directors ordered the usual payments of $1.25 on the class "B" preferred stock and 87½ cents on the class "A" preferred stock. Directors also declared the annual dividend of 25 cents per share on the original preferred stock. All are payable January 1, 1931, to stockholders of record December 1, 1930.

Net income for the first nine months of 1930 totaled $870,753, while preferred dividend requirements were $3,900,400, leaving a deficit of $3,029,667. This compared with net income of $13,725,876 in the comparable period of 1929.

Officials of the corporation pointed out the results this year were not entirely comparable with 1929 in view of changes in the affairs of the corporation which has taken over the radio manufacturing facilities of the General Electric and Westinghouse Electric since last year.

Gross income during the September quarter totalled $32,418,177 against $63,272,925 in the like period in 1929, and for the first nine months of 1930 totalled $85,150,256, against $123,712,518 in the first nine months of 1929.

FALLING PRICES SEEN AS SPUR TO FARMING

Large Scale Wheat Grower Says Low Cost Production Would Solve Problems

By MERRYLE RUKEYSER.

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—Is the decline of wheat prices this week to the lowest trough since 1906 an unmixed evil?

Perhaps there is too much tendency on the part of the human race to identify its fortunes with those of bull speculators. Hickman Price, brilliant large scale wheat grower of Amarillo, Tex., sees a silver lining in the clouds which hover over the commodity markets.

Mr. Rukeyser

Now that politicians and bankers have spoken freely concerning the farm problem—and been wrong, let's hear about the farm problem from an expert agriculturist. Instead of trying, like Canute of old, to sweep back the waves of price recession, Mr. Price significantly points out:

"Times such as these, of falling prices, if properly regarded and made the most of, are in the long run, a great boon and impetus to more profitable farming. They are a challenge to farming intelligence. They force those who intend to remain farmers to set their houses in order.

FARMS MUST EARN

"The farmer with one eye on the plow and the other upon the real estate agent is no longer able to survive. A farm is only worth what it will earn. No more, no less.

"Low prevailing commodity prices result not from production, as so many affirm. Quite to the contrary, they obtain because of under consumption. In spite of the commodity markets being clutted with the food, clothing and shelter products which come from the soil, there are untold millions in this and foreign countries who today are underfed, poorly clad, or inadequately housed."

Mr. Price does not believe that the politician can wave a magic wand, and give farm relief. He thinks that the modern farmer will relieve himself by accepting the mandate of low prices, and through large scale industrialized production, with the aid of labor saving machinery, emulate Mr. Ford and make his profit out of a large volume with a narrow margin of profit instead of continuing to produce a relatively small volume at a high rate of cost. Although Mr. Price does not say this, his thesis implies that the inefficient farmer will be driven from the field, just as the inefficient storekeeper and businessman has been crowded out in recent years. Mr. Price believes that new fertile wheat fields in the Texas Panhandle will in time force the older wheat fields in the Northwest to turn to other products.

WOULD CUT COST

Giving his own plan of farm relief, Mr. Price says:

"It is found in low cost production. As prices are steadily forced down by efficient producers, the demand will come over a wider market, vastly increased and new uses will be found for many stable farm products, for much that has hitherto been wasted. Thus not only the consumer will be benefitted, but the farmer, and that portion of the farm population released for work in these industries."

Instead of being frightened at the ghost of the Russian wheat competition, Mr. Price advocates methods which will meet world competition. For the long pull, Mr. Price has faith that the cost of producing a bushel of wheat can be enormously reduced, making the current low prices, the lowest in 24 years, seem fantastically high.

Mr. Price says:

"Farming is essentially a business of speedily handling enormous quantities of earth. When you develop power units with accompanying plows and tillage implements which will reduce the cost of the operations proportionate to the saving created by the combine, contrasted with the binder and the thresher, low indeed will become farm production costs. They will be so reduced that wheat, for example, will be produced at a total cost of 10 cents a bushel or less.

"With wheat costs already down to 40 and 30 cents, 10 cents may appear unattainable. Yet many now living will witness such low costs, when transportation and power units are built especially for mass production."

GOOD NEWS IGNORED

In its blue mood, Wall Street has chosen to put an adverse interpretation on every current development. As in other bear periods, it throws good news in the waste basket. Although the Democratic vote was perhaps larger than anticipated, the Street was aware before the election that a political change was imminent. With Congress almost evenly divided and with a Republican in the White House, the Street at least ought to get some satisfaction from the assurance that with this divided setup there will be no unwise legislation, which might give finance, which as Otto H. Kahn once remarked, is an old lady with shaken nerves, something to worry about. Furthermore, the writer has always felt that prosperity and depression spring from economic causes, and not from the victory of one or the other of the two major parties.

Among the select group of corporations which is showing enhanced profits this year in spite of the depression is the Warren Foundry and Pipe Company. Although the company, which reported increased profits for the first half of the year, does not as a matter of general policy publish quarterly earnings, Leonard Peckitt, president of the company, told me:

"In a general way, I may say that the third quarter earnings, as is usually the case in business such as we are engaged in, show up considerably better than that of earlier months and as a matter of fact, I shall be surprised and disappointed if the year's earnings are not sufficient to take care of the annual dividend of $2 on the outstanding stock in the hands of the public, viz: 185,000 shares.

"The increased earnings over 1929 are very largely due to operating economies and altogether, I am well pleased with the results."

Prussian State Acquires Oil Property

BERLIN, Nov. 8.—Oil producing land in the Province of Oriheim, near Hanover, has been acquired by the Prussian state, it was announced today. The tract includes territory on which four wells already are in operation and two others are nearing completion.

The purchase, at a reported price of from four to six million marks, was made from the Anton Raeky interests, apparently in line with the government's policy of preventing further oil properties from being acquired by foreign concerns.

Germany's hitherto unexplored oil fields in Hanover, Oldenburg and Brunswick first attracted international attention last April when it was announced that the North European Oil Corporation of Delaware had acquired 3,000,000 acres in Hanover and Oldenburg.

C. P. R. DIVIDEND LIKELY TO BE COVERED

Special Income Expected To Enable Road to Show $2.50 a Share on Stock

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—Canadian Pacific Railway Company in all probability will cover dividend requirements this year on its more than 13,300,000 shares of $25 par common stock at the regular $2.50 annual rate. While earnings from railroad transportation have declined sharply this year from last year's levels, and for all 1930 are likely to be substantially below the $43,144,544 reported for 1929, special income is likely to be close to, and may exceed last year's record figure of $15,232,220.

The company reported net income of $41,477,761, after taxes and charges for 1929, equivalent after preferred dividend requirements to $11.05 a share on 3,330,617 shares of $100 par value common stock outstanding at the end of the year.

4-FOR-1 SPLIT-UP

The common shares this year have been split-up on a four-for-one basis, through a reduction in the par value to $25, from $100. On the basis of the approximately 13,300,000 shares now outstanding, last year's net income would be equal to $2.76 a share.

Canadian Pacific's net earnings from railroad transportation in the nine months ended September 30 totaled $22,611,483, compared with $28,131,789 in the corresponding period last year. For the final three months a more favorable comparison is likely to be made as a result of the important reduction in operating expenses which has been effected. Net in the final quarter also should be benefitted by better comparison of gross with 1929 than was shown in the first nine months.

TRAFFIC VOLUME OFF

Railroad operations of the Canadian Pacific this year have reflected the substantial shrinkage in the volume of traffic in the Dominion. For the year up to the end of May both gross revenues and net earnings from the railroad properties were substantially behind last year. Beginning in June, however, a much better control of expenses was evident; and in August and September this better control of expenses was translated into an increase in net earnings as compared with the corresponding period of 1929 in spite of a decrease in gross revenues for those months.

Endicott-Johnson President Resigns

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—George F. Johnson has resigned as president of the Endicott-Johnson Company and has been elected chairman of the board. His son, George W. Johnson, was elected president. Charles F. Johnson, was elected first vice president and general manager.

Building Activity Gains During October

October contracts awarded for new residential building in the 37 states east of the Rocky Mountains were larger than in any month since May but showed a decline of about 25 per cent from the valuation reported in October 1929, according to F. W. Dodge Corporation. Out of a total new construction volume amounting to $337,301,400 new residential building undertaken during the past month accounted for $104,670,300 or 31 per cent of construction awards of all types in the 37 eastern states. Total construction undertaken in this territory during October aggregated $337,301,400 as compared with $331,863,500 for September and $445,642,300 for October 1929. Total new construction contracted for in the 37 eastern states during the ten elapsed months of 1930 was valued at $4,022,024,900 as against $5,046,909,900 for the corresponding ten months of 1929.

CANCELS OIL SCHEDULES

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—The Export Petroleum Association, Inc., announced that it had cancelled all of its export price schedules. The statement was issued by Gilbert Montague, vice president and general counsel, who declined to comment further. It was believed in Wall Street that it was due to the unsettled condition of the oil industry.

For some time there has been considerable opposition among members of the association to its official prices, according to oil company executives. Many contended the prices did not represent the actual status of the export market.

The Export Petroleum Association was organized under the Webb Act which permits domestic corporations to combine solely for export trade.

Republic Steel's Loss Worse Than Expected By Wall Street.

A net loss of $97,268 after charges reported by the Republic Steel Corporation for the nine months ended September 30, was considerably worse than the Street had looked for and reflects the lessened demand from the automobile industry, as well as the low prices for products which ruled during the current year. Republic has been confronted with the extraordinary expenses incident to merging companies and bringing about co-ordination in addition to the unsatisfactory conditions in the steel industry generally. Those factors chiefly are responsible for the showing made thus far in the current year.

Continental Can has been maintaining its sales during the current year. Indications are that the volume in 1930 will be close to that of the preceding 12 months. The favorable weather during the fall prolonged the canning season and offset in part the reduction due to the drought earlier in the year. For 1929, the company reported net profits of $8,967,702, equal to $5.02 a share on the 1,725,045 common shares outstanding. The carryover of canned products will be smaller this year, which may mean better business in 1931.

Although General Railway Signal has suffered with other issues during the reactionary periods, interests that were accumulating the stock on a scale in recent weeks have retained their holdings on the theory that the stock is not over-priced on the basis of its selling price to earnings ratio. Talk still is heard of advantages for the company because of the tendency among railroads to seek greater economies, which may be realized with the various products of the company.

Heavy selling which broke out yesterday in the railroad list shortly after the opening, was perhaps one of the causes for the resumption of liquidation in the general list in subsequent dealings. The pick of the seasoned dividend paying issues among the carriers were forced back under persistent liquidation for losses ranging up to 7 points in Union Pacific. New lows were general in the group with New York Central at the lowest touched since 1926. The decline in railroad stocks from the high levels ruling early this year is apparent from comparison of current yields with those obtainable at the 1930 highs. The yield on Atchison has risen from 4.2 per cent to 5.3 per cent; on B. & O., from 5.7 to 9.1 per cent; Rock Island, 5.6 to 10.1 per cent; Great Northern, 4.5 to 9.5 per cent; New York Central, 4.1 to 6.2 per cent; Pennsylvania, 4.6 to 6.6 per cent, and Union Pacific, 4.2 to 5.4½ per cent.

Selling which swept stocks into new low territory yesterday had all the earmarks of genuine liquidation with speculative offerings for the decline seemingly playing only a minor part in the proceedings. Most observers in the street were rubbing their brows in search of an explanation for the latest outpouring of stocks. One commentator who ordinarily has little to say one way or another was moved to remark that the selling was not caused primarily by the belief of holders that most stocks are still ruling at too high levels. Rather his opinion, and it was shared by others, was that the selling was of a necessitous nature reflecting the liquidation of collateral behind loans.

Unofficial forecasts now beginning to appear indicate that the forthcoming monthly statement of the Steel Corporation, setting forth its unfilled tonnage as of October 31, last, will be somewhat more favorable than might generally be expected. Due to contraction in mill operations during the period, and the pick up in buying, particularly from the railroads, it is now believed that the statement will approach a stand-off with chances believed to favor a slight gain. In the six months to the end of September, only one increase amounting to 53,991 tons was reported at the end of July. The corporation's backlog of unfilled orders in that period showed a net reduction of 1,106,315 tons. Last month a drop of 155,866 tons was reported and in October last year a net increase of 183,981 tons was shown.

Economist Sees Prosperity Near

KANSAS CITY, Nov. 8.—In spite of the fact that 1930 to date stands well above the first 10 months of 1921 in volume of business and the worst of 1930 is not as bad as the worst of 1921, "we have come measurably close to the low point of 1921, and the fundamentals do not justify that," Benjamin M. Anderson, economist of the Chase National Bank of New York, said, addressing a luncheon gathering of the Chamber of Commerce here. He compared the disorganized credit conditions in 1921 with the sound situation today and stated there was evidence that stocks of merchandise on hand had been reduced to a point that made substantial restocking inevitable. Mr. Anderson believes the country is on the threshold of a long period of prosperity.

EMPLOYES HEAR RADIO TALK

One of the problems of the modern executive of the large corporation is his inability to keep in personal touch with his entire organization. With many thousands of employes spread all over the world the mass convention becomes a practical impossibility, and so the organization is in danger of becoming detached from the inspirational influences of the management.

John J. Schumann, Jr., president of General Motors Acceptance Corporation, has found at least a partial solution to this problem through the use of the electric phonograph and particularly the reproducing perfection of the latest development of the combination radio-phonograph.

By way of this device all the employes of the G. M. A. C. branch organization in Pittsburgh had the opportunity to hear their president simultaneously with all of the 6,000 employes of the 107 branches of G. M. A. C. throughout the world.

In his address to his organization, Mr. Schumann laid emphasis upon the record established in sound instalment credit operations during the past 15 months. He pointed out that G. M. A. C. had handled over $2,200,000,000 of business since January 1, 1929, and had liquidated more than $1,800,000,000 of it, and as proof of the fundamental soundness of the properly managed sales financing business, pointed out that of all the obligations purchased by G. M. A. C. in the prosperity year of 1929, less than 4 per cent remained on the books.

BUSINESS DULL IN EUROPE

Reports from European countries generally show continued dullness with a tendency toward further depression in most countries, especially in Italy, where lack of confidence has caused a further slackening of business, and in Hungary, where poor crops have been added to other unfavorable factors. In Norway, export industries have been affected by the world depression, but crop returns were favorable. In Czechoslovakia, unemployment, largely as the result of seasonal factors, has reached the highest figure in six years. The slump in Egyptian foreign trade continues as the result of the unfavorable cotton market.

In the United Kingdom the depression does not seem to have become intensified and a slightly better sentiment prevails in a few industries. Increase of unemployment in the Swiss machinery and textile industries has been offset by a seasonal gain in watch manufacturing. The natural tendency toward seasonal improvement in the Irish Free State has been retarded by bad crop conditions. In Yugoslavia, although there was a sharp decline in exports during August, trade returns for eight months show a considerable improvement over last year. No appreciable change is being recorded in Canada, while in Newfoundland conditions are decidedly unfavorable, owing to the poor shore fish catch and low prices. There is a slight tendency toward improvement in the Union of South Africa.

BANK DEBITS DECLINE

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—For the week ended November 1, 1930, bank debits, outside New York City, were lower than both the preceding week and the corresponding period in 1929. Bank loans and discounts of Federal Reserve member banks showed an increase over the previous week, but were lower when contrasted with the same week a year ago. Prices for representative stocks and bonds averaged higher than a week ago. As compared with the week of November 2, 1929, bond prices were higher and stock prices lower. Interest rates for both call and time money for the week ended November 1 showed no change from the previous period. Both rates were considerably lower than for the same week last year.

Wholesale prices, as measured by Fisher's index, indicated a fractional decline from the preceding week. Prices of red wheat at Kansas City, and prices for iron and steel also showed slight losses. Middling cotton at New York, however, was higher than the previous week. All wholesale prices were lower than last year.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Nature Sends Warning of Illness.

Nature has a way of sending out warnings when anything is wrong with these bodies of ours. She runs up signals of danger. And, what is more, she provides marvelous ways of attempting to correct faults in this intricate mechanism which is the body.

DR. COPELAND

Dropsy is a condition that warns us something is wrong. It is a symptom to be heeded. It is a condition in which the fluid substances of the blood escape into the soft tissues of the body, or into some cavity of the body.

The fluid may not have the same origin in every case. It may have escaped from the capillaries of the blood circulation, or from the veins, or yet again from the lymphatics. Whatever the source of the fluid, dropsy comes from pressure or obstruction of one of these circulatory systems.

When the tissues are firm they and the muscles are able to resist this flow, and the amount of dropsical fluid is relatively small. But in cases of disease of the liver, for instance, the quantity of fluid in the abdominal cavity is sometimes enormous. In such a case, there is nothing to do but have it drawn off by some mechanical means. Of course, such a slight operation does not effect a cure. It only serves to relieve the pressure. The underlying cause must be determined and really curative measures taken.

Your doctor will decide whether it is the liver, the kidneys, the heart, or some other organ that is at fault. Many times there is found a very scanty flow of urine through the fluid which should naturally escape this way was dammed up. If the kidneys are not seriously diseased the remedies which would increase their action will do much to prevent the accumulation of fluid in the abdominal cavity.

When the dropsical fluid happens to be in the ankles or eyelids, the condition is known as "oedema." If it is found all over the body it is called "anasarca." If the fluid fills one of the cavities it is known as "dropsy." When it is the abdominal cavity it is termed "ascites."

In Bright's Disease, there is failure on the part of the kidneys to function as they should. The quantity of urine is limited and the fluids of the body escape into the soft tissues. The affected parts are swollen, of course. On pressure of the finger the skin and underlying tissue are pitted and fail to fly back into place when released. All their natural elasticity is lost because the tissues are boggy and water soaked.

One suffering from dropsy of any sort needs the helpful oversight of a doctor. He must not trust to his own skill. By correcting any organic defects and the building up of the health by careful diet and rest, the return to a normal condition is only a matter of time. But persistent dropsical conditions should not be neglected.

Answers to Health Queries

Mrs. G. W. N. Q.—What would cause a little boy of 6 years of age to belch all the time and what would cause his eyes to stay swollen?

A.—Hyeracidity and indigestion would account for the former condition. Have a careful urinalysis made to determine whether or not the kidneys are involved. Your doctor will advise you.

Miss L. McI. Q.—What do you advise for dandruff?

A.—Careful and regular shampooing and the use of a good hair tonic should be generally helpful.

By JAMES J. LONG

Shifts in Grid Form. Playing Values Change. Mates Have Influence. | Reputations Mislead. Longboat Blames Witch. McCarthy Shapes Club.

DOPE WRONG BOTH WAYS ON PITT MEN

FOOTBALL SCRIBES AND football fans, like other human beings, are guided in their estimates of men as much by old reputations and press-agenting of one sort or another as by actual performances. The average follower of a college team, seeing it in perhaps three or four games a year, is particularly apt to assume that the boys who starred in one season are still the luminaries of their eleven, and that the boys who he is told in early season predictions will go great are the ones who make up the backbone of the outfit.

Josh Williams.

Often this isn't true. The boy who plays a bang-up game one year may, for physical or mental reasons within himself, or because of a greater or lesser adaptation to the lads on the team with him, fall short of that form in another season. Or the reverse. A lot depends upon the combination of men. "A" goes great when "B" is in the lineup, but can't do so well when "C" is playing beside him, even though "C" may be a better player individually than "B." Or the presence or absence of "D" may make all the difference in the world to "A," "B" and "C," because "D" is the type of player who brings out the best, or perhaps prevents the best, in his mates.

AS AN EXAMPLE of this point, take the current Pitt eleven. At the start of the season it was freely predicted that Josh Williams, Jim MacMurdo, Charley Tully and Rip Collins would be among the headliners of the season, adding to already well-earned reputations. Veterans of a championship team of 1929, it was generally agreed that they would come mighty close to being the main cogs in the 1930 machine.

Who ranked Walter Milligan, Ernie Lewis and Paul Reider with them as team assets? If any one did he kept it to himself. Nor was there any reason why these players should have been rated in preason estimates with the four husky veterans first named. But what happened? MacMurdo nor Tully, nor Collins, nor Williams has in any game this season shown the qualities that brought luster to his name a year ago.

OF COURSE IN the cases of two of the quartet, injuries had much to do with this, and it is not meant to imply that any of them is giving less than his best or that he has no more good football left in him.

Paul Reider.

There is yet time for Jim or Josh or Charley or Rip to rise and shine and prove himself as great a luminary as ever. But in the games played so far these lads have been disappointments, not only to their admirers but, doubtless, also to themselves.

IS IT BECAUSE from Joe Donchess, Ray Montgomery, Toby Uansa or Tom Parkinson, or the other departed stars of the 1929 team, these gridders, particularly, got some quality of inspiration that brought out their best play, and that there isn't any one or anything in the present squad to evoke such a complete development of their skill? Or should it be attributed to the serious bumps which slowed down some of them, and an inability to throw off the effects of those injuries sufficiently to get back to starring form?

CONSIDER, ON THE other hand, Lewis and Milligan. Neither was counted on as a regular; each was rated as having a tough fight for a position. Milligan, in fact, didn't make it until Hart Morris was hurt. Neither was considered, on the basis of other years, a major asset to the Panthers. And for this reason they have been given less recognition than is their due.

Next season's fans, perhaps, will honor Milligan as one of the stars of a Blue and Gold line. Lewis, graduating in June, will be denied that belated compensation. As a matter of fact, the two are, with Ralph Daugherty, the most valuable elements in Pitt's forward wall, judged on actual performance in games up to date.

YOUNG REIDER, FLASHING as a freshman a year ago, was figured a potential star, but few expected him to attain that status this season. Not many sophomores do. That he is recognized as a prime factor in Pitt's strength, while Milligan and Lewis are somewhat overlooked by many fans, is due largely to the fact that, as a halfback, he is privileged to do the things that show.

Walter Milligan.

You can't hide the ability of a lad who catches long passes and makes big gains on dodging runs, as this boy does. Yet, though given less notice, Milligan and Lewis have been performing just as brilliantly, and just as surprisingly, at their line posts.

ADD TO THESE three Capt. Eddie Baker, the smartest quarterback Pitt has had in many a day, whose acquired versatility as kicker, signal-caller, interferer and ball carrier makes him truly the keystone of the eleven, and Daugherty, fit to rank with a long succession of great Blue and Gold centers, and you have the group to whom is due such success as the Panthers have had in 1930. Jess Quatse played a good game at Syracuse, Jimmy Clark against Notre Dame, and Franklin Hood against West Virginia and Syracuse, but through the whole schedule Lewis, Milligan, Reider, Baker and Daugherty have furnished the main strength.

AND WHO WOULD have forecast in August that this would be true, and that with the season almost completed the list of current stars in the Panther ranks would not include the names of the veterans of whom so much was expected?

But a senior in November is a tough hombre, on Pitt teams, anyhow. With the end of the road in sight, he usually rises to the well-known blaze of glory as a concluding act. And if that happens to Williams and Tully and a few others it will make the going rough for Carnegie, Ohio State and Penn State.

THE FOLLOWING QUERY comes from J. G. R., of Turtle Creek: "Team A kicks ball from its own three-yard line, and Team B blocks kick. The ball bounds out of end zone and Team B recovers it. Referee blows whistle and declares it a touchback because the ball is off the playing field. Please give us the correct ruling."

It is a safety and counts two points for Team B. When the ball goes out of bounds behind the goal, provided the impetus which sends it across the goal line is given by the team defending the goal (and a blocked kick is such impetus), a safety results the instant it crosses the boundary line, no matter which side recovers it. If the impetus is given by the opposing team it is a touchback.

Tom Longboat.

TOM LONGBOAT, famous Indian distance runner of 20 years ago, who ran at old Exposition Hall here against Percy Smallwood and others, is ill in Toronto, Ont., and believes a witch is stalking him. Relating a streak of ill fortune of which he has been the victim during the last few years, Longboat said that first one of his toes was crushed, then he suffered a broken leg, and now he is laid up with an illness which the white man's medicine has failed to cure. He declares he will seek the help of a medicine man of his own race in an attempt to throw the witch off his trail. First he will visit the medicine man at the Six Nations Reserve in Caledonia, and says that if the latter cannot effect a cure he will seek the aid of the "greatest of all

BLUFF TEAM'S WIN STREAK BROKEN

By JESS CARVER.

Duquesne University's football team today is just another ball club that has lost two major ball games. The ambitions of the Dukes to make it six in a row were shipwrecked on the jagged defense of a sturdy line and hard running attack of North Dakota University's Flickertail eleven at Forbes Field last evening, North Dakota taking away a 14-6 triumph over the locals.

The game, which was witnessed by a crowd of approximately 15,000, wound up the night intercollegiate football season in Pittsburgh.

AERIAL GAME SMASHED

After dropping the opening tussle of the year to West Virginia, the local disciples of Rockne won five straight. Last night, however, they struck a tough ball club, one that combined power on the attack with alertness on the defense, especially when it came to breaking up Duquesne's aerial game. The Dukes tried 16 passes, completing three, one of which was ruled complete when a Dakota defenseman was adjudged guilty of interference.

The one pass that worked to perfection, and brought cheer and hope to the hearts of Duke supporters was flung in the first period by Bud Devinney and caught by Ganzy Benedict for a touchdown. Right Halfback Richmond should have broken the pass down, but he played the man and not the ball.

North Dakota didn't get this score back right away, but, the Flickertails drove to the goal line as the period ended when Richmond and Burma hammered the Duke line and Schave passed to Jarrett to put the ball on the very goal line.

JARRETT SCORES

After being held for two downs as the second quarter opened, Jarrett took a lateral pass from Burma and raced around Duquesne's left end for a touchdown. On the try for the extra point, the Dukes were offside and the point awarded North Dakota.

North Dakota scored again after taking advantage of the first big break of the game. The Flickertails obtained possession of the ball on their own three-yard line when Murphy downed one of Smoke Abele's kicks. Schave broke through the short side for a run of 36 yards, but the Dukes tightened and Jarrett was forced to kick.

He booted the ball to Bud Devinney, in at quarterback for the Night Riders, who fumbled when struck by Felber and Urevig and the ball was recovered by a North Dakota lineman on the Dukes' 16-yard line. After two attempts at plugging the line failed, Fullback Burma ripped through Duquesne's left guard on the old spinner play for the score.

LOSE ANOTHER POINT

Again the Dukes were offside on the kick and the fourteenth point went to the Dakotians.

There was no more scoring, honors being close to even during the second half. Duquesne failed to take advantage of the same situation that brought about North Dakota's second touchdown when Jarrett fumbled a Duquesne punt and Mike Farrare recovered on the Dakota 25-yard stripe. Duquesne lacked the punch and finesse to carry the pigskin across.

The second half turned out to be more or less of a kicking duel, North Dakota played it safe, while the Dukes, after failing to gain on kicks, resorted to a wild passing attack in the fourth period. They tried 12 of their 16 passes in the second half, and completed two.

STRONG OFFENSE

North Dakota employed a seven-man line with a diamond defense which effectively stopped Duquesne's running attack. Jarrett and Burma turned out to be

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF YESTERDAY: A BLUE STREAK—The conception of space is finite only in a mathematical sense. Thus, it has been suggested by Minkowski, Einstein and others that space may be finite and yet unbounded, for the reason that anything traveling through cosmic space never would come to any "jumping-off-place," and yet the total volume of space might be known to be less than a certain number of cubic light years. The doctrine of the finitude of space is a part of the famous doctrine of "curvature of space," and involves the assumption of one or more dimensions in addition to those recognized by the traditional Euclidean geometry. In accordance with this theory, a straight line, instead of being infinite in length, would return to the point of origin. It has been estimated that the greatest distance which anything would travel in a straight line before arriving at the point of origin is of the order of 500,000,000,000 light years, or about 3×10^{24} miles. Of course, these estimates cannot be put to test, because the greatest distance our most powerful telescopes enable us to see is less than one-five-hundredth of this distance. TOMORROW—THE CRUISE OF THE DEAD.

DUKE FRESHMEN WIN, 38-0

CHARLEROI, Pa., Nov. 8.—Buff Donnelli's Duquesne freshmen football team ran roughshod over the California Teachers College reserves, 38 to 0, before a large crowd here last night. Nussbaum gave the fans a lot to talk about in the first quarter. After several minutes of play, he hit off tackle, reversed his field and ran 26 yards for a touchdown. Again in the first quarter he hit off-tackle and ran 30 yards for touchdown, place-kicking for extra point.

Donnelli started sending his second string in with the score 13 to 0. In the second quarter, Baine, substitute end, blocked a kick, recovered it and ran 12 yards for touchdown. In the same quarter, Zaninnelli plunged over for touchdown, Deluca place-kicking for extra point. In the third quarter the freshmen added 12 more points when Decoster plunged over for touchdown and Nussbaum ran 41 yards for touchdown.

Niccali, Venerri, Sinko, Decoster, Nussbaum and Zaninnelli featured for the Dukes. Diskin and Pata starred for the losers. The lineup:

Title Swim Events At P. A. A. Tonight

The pool of the Pittsburgh Athletic Association will be the scene of a championship swimming meet tonight when the leading mermen of the district will compete for two Allegheny Mountain Association crowns. The title events are the 50-yard free-style for men and the low board fancy diving.

A 50-yard novice race and a 100-yard breast stroke event for women also are scheduled.

Entries have been received from Uniontown Y., the University of Pittsburgh, H. W. Oliver Club, Willows Pool Club, Pittsburgh Aquatic Club and the Pittsburgh Athletic Association.

BOBCATS TOP SALEM, 13-0

CLARKSBURG, W. Va., Nov. 8.—(AP.)—West Virginia Wesleyan found Salem College a stubborn foe yesterday, the Bobcats extending them to win, 13 to 0.

Wesleyan scored first in the final moments of the second quarter. Edmundson recovered a fumbled punt by Tiberi on the Salem 23-yard line and on the second play Battles passed 20 yards over the goal to Hagerdon. Art Bachtel added the extra point.

The second touchdown came in the third period after a 55-yard march that had its beginning when Battles returned Tiberi's punt 25 yards to the Salem 30. Three plays later Battles ran around right end for six yards and the marker.

Salem, using the forward pass, advanced close to the Bobcat goal in the closing minutes of the game. On the final play, West dropped Tiberi's pass over the goal line.

Wesleyan made 16 first downs to 8 for the Salem. The lineup:

Wesleyan—13.		Salem—0.

GILBERT HALL VICTOR

BUENOS AIRES, Nov. 8.—(AP.)—Gilbert Hall, tennis star from South Orange, N. J., made his debut in the Argentine National championship yesterday. He defeated an Argentine player, Armstrong, by scores of 6-3, 6-2, 6-2.

LOCAL ELEVENS RENEW OLD GRID FEUD

ers by running over Western Reserve, Waynesburg, West Virginia and Syracuse without being scored on, but then faltered and was soundly trounced by Notre Dame and held even by an inferior Nebraska team, is just as far from being a favorite.

Add to the fact that both elevens have been in the mental dumps for the past two weeks to the fact that neither will be able to present full physical strength, and you have a highly uncertain proposition. Both are due to click, goodness only knows, but whether the coaches will be able to whip their elevens to the pitch necessary to crash the stronghold of victory remains to be seen.

Both squads were taken out of town Thursday evening after final hard drills on their respective practice fields to remain until just before game time this afternoon. Tentative starting lineups were announced prior to the departures for the hide-outs. These lineups, considered doubtful at the time, have taken on such a degress of authenticity that they are expected to stand up for the kick-off today.

LINE REMAINS SAME

For Pitt, the line will be the same as started the fracas at Nebraska last week, with Jim MacMurdo and Rip Collins at the ends; Charley Tully and Jess Quatse at the tackles; the battered Ernie Lewis and Mike Milligan at the guards, and Ralph Daugherty at center.

In the backfield, Capt. Eddie Baker will go at quarterback to do the kicking and most of the passing. Warren Heller will get another chance at left halfback, and Bulldog Reider, who flashed into prominence against Notre Dame and continued his fine play against the Cornhuskers, is to start in place of the veteran Josh Williams at right half.

Much of Pitt's offensive hope will be centered about young Reider. He has shown himself to be a formidable ball-carrier and an excellent pass-receiver and alert defensive man.

Carnegie has been having quarterback trouble and has suffered injuries to star linemen. A sophomore back will get the important quarterback call today, Coach Waddell and Advisory Coach Steffen having practically settled on using Stewart Dueger at Harry McCurdy's place. Dueger stepped into McCurdy's shoes in the game against W. Y. U. last week and astounded with his fine play.

SHIFT ON LINE

On the line, Rosenzweig and Pete Flanagan will be used at the ends. This is as usual. Tank Highberger will be at his usual spot at left tackle, with Lenny Schnupp in at right tackle in the place of the injured Fletcher. Hooks Sample and Capt. Dreshar at the guards and Alex Ducanis doing the best he can with his injured leg, at center.

Toss up or no toss up, the chances are that the boys will put on a great ball game this afternoon. It appears to me as though the team that gets off on the right foot is going to be ahead at the wire. Let Reider get away against Tech or Eyth against Pitt, or let one team or the other toss a quick pass for a good gain, possibly a touchdown, and you can have the other's chances of a successful comeback for a dime, yes, you can have a dozen for a dime.

The Panthers hold a decided edge over Carnegie in the matter of games won during the 16 years the rivals have been meeting. Pitt has won an even dozen ball games, Tech has taken four. These clubs can't be bothered with ties, at least when they meet each other.

Festivities will get under way promptly at 2 p. m.

BENEFIT SERIES IS PROPOSED

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 8.—(AP.)—A series of football games between leading colleges for the benefit of the unemployed was proposed last night by Mayor Harry A. Mackey.

Mackey first sent a telegram to President Hoover offering the use of the Municipal Stadium here for a game between the Army and Navy. Yesterday he wired the President suggesting that the receipts from this game, if such a contest is arranged, be divided equally between New York and Philadelphia for the relief of the poor and unemployed.

At the same time, the Mayor announced that he had arranged a meeting in his office Monday of representatives of local colleges and prominent citizens to promote his plan for the benefit

TWO TRI-STATE CONFERENCE GAMES ON TAP

GENEVA TAKES ON TITANS' MACHINE

Naturally enough, the Pitt-Tech game shows the way to all other struggles and will pack away the greatest crowd, with a turnout of better than 50,000 expected.

Geneva and Westminster, meeting at New Wilmington in their annual tussle, promise hectic action and an afternoon of thrills. The Titans will enter the game on the short end, but are certain to give Howard Harpster's rampaging Covenanters a stiff argument.

In a second Conference game, Thiel and Bethany meet at Bethany. The Bisons, who have been going no where fast this year, are hardly a match for the Lutherans.

GROVES PLAY JACKETS

Grove City, having taken two on the chin on successive weeks, hope to get back into the win column by defeating rugged Waynesburg at Waynesburg, a task that always has been difficult for the Grovers.

Allegheny, one of the undefeated and untied elevens of the East, faces its biggest test in the powerful Dartmouth eleven, and apparently is in for a setback. Davis-Elkins is in the East for a game with Albright.

At Morgantown, mothers' and fathers' day will be celebrated as West Virginia and the Kansas Aggies clash at Mountaineer Field in one of the nation's leading intersectional games.

NOTRE DAME VS. PENN

In the East, the Notre Dame-Penn game in Philadelphia holds the spotlight. Michigan and Harvard clash at Cambridge. Georgia faces New York University in New York. Navy plays Ohio State at Baltimore and Columbia, happy over the triumph last week over Cornell, is up against a tough one in Colgate. Illinois faces Army at West Point.

Fordham, unbeaten and untied, is in Detroit for a game with the powerful Detroit University eleven, which was the victim of a surprise defeat at the hands of Iowa last week.

DARTMOUTH READY

HANOVER, N. H., Nov. 8.—(AP.)—Dartmouth will start its strongest line-up against the undefeated Allegheny football team here today and Head Coach Jackson Cannell hopes that his regulars will pile up such a big lead in the first half that he can afford to experiment in the last two periods.

Though Allegheny has not been scouted and is an unknown quantity to the Green, Cannell has agreed to use a squad of only 30 men, the same man power that the crippled Pennsylvanians will be able to muster.

It was definitely announced that Ed Sutton and Stan Yudicky, injured varsity fullback and end, would not be able to play and their positions will be filled by Bob Wilkin and Forrest Branch at the opening kickoff.

JACKETS LOSE LOHR

WAYNESBURG, Pa., Nov. 8.—Red Lohr, Pitcairn youth, who was to have started in the Waynesburg backfield against Grove City today, suffered a severe ankle injury in signal drill and will not be able to play.

GODFREY VICTOR

CHAMP STOPPED

MY FIFTY YEARS IN BASEBALL

By CONNIE MACK,
Manager, World Champion Philadelphia Athletics

INSTALLMENT NO. 54.

Our experiences at the start of the season of 1929 were most refreshing. After our clean-cut conquest before President Hoover on opening day in Washington, we won the second game in just as convincing fashion.

Our boys were hitting the ball hard and fielding in sparkling style. Rain stopped the third game and we went to New York in high spirits, for we had won two games from the team that had made the best showing in the exhibition season.

Connie Mack

We opened in the Yankee Stadium on April 19, with the same lineup and with Quinn pitching. The Yanks had their familiar ensemble, with Hoyt on the pitching rise.

This game I always regarded as our most fiendish defeat of the year. In the years he has been pitching, and they stretch over many presidential terms, Quinn, who deals wet pitches off his master right arm, never looked better.

The Yanks scored the tieing and winning runs on easy fly balls lost in the sun by Haas, one of the most brilliant centerfielders in the game. He was bewildered by shadows hovering around the huge horseshoe grandstand.

Never before or since has Haas been bothered by the blazing orb of the sun in defending his position. I believe it was because he faced the first real sun of the year and he lost the balls as they came out of the shadows of the stands to him.

Anyway, he missed two preposterously simple fly balls and the Yanks won the game, 2 to 1, getting one run in each inning the easy fly was lost.

We were beaten in this outlandish manner and the same old cry went up that we never could play baseball against the Yanks. Everybody on the team was raving mad when we went back to the hotel, for we could imagine just what the fans in Philadelphia were saying.

It was up to us to prove that we were a different team, so we went out the third day and beat the Yanks, 7 to 4, in a game shortened by rain. It had rained on the second day, so the New York series ended in an even break.

OPENS HOME STAND

With a record of three out of four games on the road against Washington and New York, we went to Philadelphia to open the American League season there under the most favorable conditions.

To show how uncertain baseball is, we lost the first game to Washington in 11 innings, and it just turned out that we defeated the Senators in our next 10 meetings and wrecked them for the season because the majority of the games were played early in the year.

In our second game at home, Al Simmons returned to our lineup after missing the first five games of the season.

The Yanks followed the Senators into Philadelphia on April 26 and all fingers pointed to us. We had to do something big to convince our followers that we were at last able to break the old Yankee hoodoo, which prevented us from winning the pennant the year before.

BEAT YANKEE JINX

By taking two out of three games from the Yanks, my players became convinced that New York no longer was going to dominate the American League and that the kings of the diamond were due to be dethroned.

This early series victory also removed all doubt among our followers of our ability to hold the Yanks in check and we had all Philadelphia at our backs. It was a series triumph that inspired both players and fans.

The schedule required us to take an early trip West, and we opened in St. Louis on May 5.

On May 12 we were tied for first place, and, on May 14, when we vanquished the Tigers, 10 to 8, we took the lead and stayed on top for the remainder of the season.

As the season wore on, we gradually increased our lead. Our next important series called for five games in three days in New York, beginning June 21, when the Yanks had an excellent chance to throw logs in front of us.

BIG LEAD AMASSED

When we won three of these five games on the Yanks' own grounds, our players were convinced that we had nothing to fear from the Yanks any more.

Our regular lineup did not become intact until May 11, when Shortstop Boley partly recovered from his sore arm, but he played only few games when the arm became aggravated. He did not get into the game again until June 17, and then played only to July 3, when he contracted a severe charleyhorse and another long rest was imperative.

There is an old baseball legend that the team on top on July 4 generally wins the pennant. Sometimes it does and sometimes it does not, but followers always point to it as a day that means something to pennant contenders.

Therefore, on the night of Independence Day, when we showed a lead of nine full games, we had a right to feel happy.

Sport Vignettes

By tonight we should know the score of the Pitt-Tech football game, but don't pay off any bets on the winner until you see the movies of the touchdowns on Monday . . . An example of what a nicely built-up rivalry and tradition mean will be given when the Panthers and Skibos clash at the Stadium for the so-called city championship with both teams defeated so far, Tech twice and Pitt once and also tied once. . . . The bowl will be jammed for the battle, which will draw an even larger turnout than has been the case in past years when the rivals have met head-on with each boasting a better record than it does for the present campaign.

Anybody who can confidently predict a winner today is a genius and should be guessing 'em in the numbers racket . . . Both teams possess a lot of power and have been strong on the defensive at times, but both also have had their weak moments and almost anything may happen with both in the same game . . . . Much depends, it would seem, on the quarterback play of the Tartans . . . . The fans will be pulling for a comeback by Harry McCurdy, who had an offday for Tech against N. Y. U., last Saturday, and also will be hoping that Stew Dueger, the third string quarter, who starred when he succeeded McCurdy in that engagement, will get another chance to display his wares . . . . Dueger is being groomed for the regular job in the seasons to come, since Hymie Goldberg, who has been McCurdy's principal understudy, will not be back next season.

For the benefit of the New York University alumni and students who complain of their treatment by the police in Pittsburgh when they attempt to uproot the goal posts following victories and then proceed to try to tear down hostelries, as set forth in another column today, let it be said here and now that the so-called big town boys are the only ones who come here through all of the football seasons and act like hicks. . . Goalpost uprooting went out of fashion in these enlightened football parts before New York University even knew what a football team looked like, and anyway, the goal posts belong to the Stadium and the police are there to guard them the same as they would guard the seats if any of the visiting hosts tried to take them home for kindling wood. If they haven't yet got over their goal-post-stealing ideas in New York, it simply goes to show that the game there still is in its cradle days and should be brought up to the times. . . In other words the New York fans ought to grow up and get over playing with goal posts.

Incidentally, Pittsburgh hasn't yet forgotten the silent and shabby treatment given its newspapers and the public at large by N. Y. U., in the case of Al Lassman, following that 1928 game here, when all news of the player's serious condition was kept secret and he finally was taken out of town under such veiled conditions that it was not until he was well on the way to New York that he was gone. . . It was all very well to ballyhoo that game and this year's game with Tech in the newspapers, but to print the truth about Lassman, that was news and—unspeakable!

Fire Enlivens Press Box at Dukes' Game

Press box doings at the Duquesne-North Dakota game at Forbes Field last night were enlivened during the second period when a charcoal brazier, filled with glowing hot embers, was accidentally overturned.

The coals tumbled out and set fire to the canvass wind breaker in the back of the press rows. For a while the fire blazed merrily, the hard-working scribes being forced to leave their seats.

The blaze finally was placed under control, but not until the canvass had been destroyed and the woodwork of the back part of the press stand set smouldering.

MOUNTAINEERS, KANSAS AGGIES SET FOR TILT

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Nov. 8.—(AP.)—Coach Rodgers took his West Virginia University football team aside yesterday afternoon and gave the members a lecture on deception—that of the Kansas Aggies in particular.

He warned the players that they could expect plenty of tricks today when the Mountaineers meet the Kansans on the local field. To emphasize his point, he told his proteges of the tricky play of Bo McMillin, Kansas Aggie coach, when he came into the Mountaineer camp in 1919 as quarterback for the "Praying Colonels" of Centre College. Rodgers then was a member of the Mountaineer team, one of the best in the east.

The fathers and mothers of all the players of the football squad had special invitations to attend the game today. University authorities had arranged a special box on the sidelines for the parents of the players. The probable lineup:

WALKER BEATS JOHNNY RISKO

DETROIT, Nov. 8.—(AP.)—Mickey Walker, champion of all the middleweights, boxed and slugged his way into a place among the contenders for the heavyweight championship by decisively defeating Johnny Risko in a 10-round bout at Olympia Arena last night.

"Standing Room Only" signs were out at Olympia as 19,000 persons acclaimed the Toy Bulldog in his first serious appearance against a heavyweight.

Overcoming a handicap of nearly 30 pounds, Walker jumped into the lead in the second round by sending Risko to the floor for a count of nine with a stinging left to the head. From then on he was always in front, with Risko trying desperately. Walker varied his attack throughout the 10 rounds, first trying for the body and then shifting to the head, and had Risko guessing.

IN VIEW OF the good results obtained in the Yankee infield when Tony Lazzeri and Bill Chapman exchanged places last summer, Joe McCarthy, the new manager, has decided to stick to that arrangement for 1931, so Lazzeri will play third base and Chapman second, with Lyn Lary at shortstop and Lou Gehrig at first base. McCarthy rates Chapman a natural hitter and says he needs only experience to become a first-rate second baseman.

Though tentatively assigning Lary to shortstop, McCarthy admits that he would like to make a deal for Ralph Kress, of the Browns. Joe is well supplied with outfielders, having Ruth, Combs, Byrd, Rice, Cooke, Walker and Hoag. He probably will use one or two of them in dickers he will try to make for an experienced pitcher and catcher.

O. M. BROWN writes to call attention to a misstatement that Charley O'Leary, new coach of the Cubs, spent all of his previous major career in the American League. He recalls that after leaving the Tigers O'Leary played for the St. Louis Nationals under Miller Huggins in 1913.

Mr. Brown is correct. O'Leary put in a full season with the Cardinals in that year. He replaced Manager Huggins in 15 games at second base and played 103 games at shortstop.

DEFEAT AT THE hands of the heavy and capable North Dakota team by a 14-to-6 score in the final night game of Pittsburgh's football season carried no sting for the crippled Dukes and put no humiliating blot on their record. It was a creditable showing against an eleven holding so high a rating as to be invited East for a place on Army's schedule. North Dakota sent an uncommonly good team here, and it was an opponent of considerable class that tripped up Elmer Layden's charges. Besides, this is the first time in three consecutive years that Duquesne has been defeated twice in one season, and it is only the second defeat the Bluffites have suffered in their last 21 games. That's just about as good as college records go. No team can win them all, and an occasional defeat for the Dukes only emphasizes the fact that they are striving to give the public the best attractions possible rather than aim for records through the medium of soft schedules.*

PIRATES HOP DICK PROFITS BY TRADE

By CHARLES J. DOYLE.

Dick Bartell leaves Pittsburgh with the good wishes of the Pirate officials. In discussing the recent trade with the Phillies today, President Barney Dreyfuss, of the home club, states there is absolutely no bitterness toward Richard the Lionhearted among the Pittsburgh directors and that it is the wish of the Bucco officials that Dick meet with good luck in the Quaker City.

"Bartell's controversy with me before the season ended has been stressed as being the bi cause of his departure," said President Dreyfuss. "I would say that his unsteady play had more to do with it than anything else. Manager Jewel Ens was far from satisfied with his work at various stages of the season.

RECALLS OTHER SHORTSTOP

"Whenever a player leaves the Pittsburgh club he has our good wishes. Rabbit Maranville was traded for his own good and we believe that the move worked to his benefit. Later we disposed of Glenn Wright and we had his own welfare in mind when we let him get away. Bartell is a fine hustler, but there are certain things he has not learned. Maybe this deal will set him right and therefore work to his best advantage.

"So far as the merit or demerit of the swap is concerned, we must wait for the developments of the season. Nobody knows how it will work out, but on the face of things we believe that we have not been harmed in our playing strength. We have a lot of good hitters and can afford to sacrifice some offensive strength in the interest of a smoother working club."

Owner Dreyfuss did not deny that the Buccos were seeking another dependable catcher; perhaps one who could be called the first-string performer. Dreyfuss and Ens are not at all pleased with the receiving staff as it is constituted at present. The performance of Rolly Hemsley, in particular, was unsatisfactory.

BUCCOS SEEK CATCHER

Clyde Sukeforth, speedy catcher of the Redland crew, would be a welcome addition to the Pirate aggregation, and you may feel sure that if the opportunity presents itself, the home nine will grab off this little hustler.

Catcher Jimmy Wilson, of the Cardinals, was reported to be headed toward a Pittsburgh uniform, but it may be that the status of the Redbird star was changed by his brilliance in the World Series.

One month from now Pirate officials will gather in New York for the big winter meetings, and it is likely that trade talk will pop at that time. The home management, however, will be on the alert to swing a deal in advance of the pow wow.

N. Y. U. Paper Attacks Fans' Treatment Here

"Alumni and students who attended the N. Y. U.-Carnegie Tech game at Pittsburgh last Saturday returned with mingled feelings of regret and astonishment that the city of Pittsburgh would permit the reign of terror that prevailed when the game closed with an N. Y. U. victory.

"A large contingent of Pittsburgh bluecoats refused to permit New York University adherents to form on the field for the traditional snake-dance and uprooting of the goal posts. The result was that very few of the New Yorkers gained access to the playing field and these were confronted with guardians of the law defending the goal posts against any and all comers.

POLICE GUARD HOTEL

"Leaving the Stadium, it was noticed that there were 15 or 20 policemen at each of the exit gates. Upon returning to the N. Y. U. headquarters at the Webster Hall Hotel, another large delegation of policemen was found to be in evidence. This group made itself felt by rushing the crowd that had gathered at the hotel desk and in general treating the N. Y. U. visitors as if they were planning an assault on the city.

"Two years ago, after the New York University victory at Forbes Field, disgraceful scenes were enacted on the playing field when N. Y. U. alumni and students tried to uproot the goal posts. The police swung their clubs freely, and several Violet followers were injured. On that day also sections of the riot squad were in evidence.

"Traditionally, winning football teams are supposed to have the right to form on the field to participate in the snake dance and carry off the goal posts as souvenirs of victory. At the Fordham game at the Yankee Stadium on October 25 the contest had hardly ended when the goal posts fell before the Fordham adherents. The managment at the Stadium and the New York police have long since learned that the best course is to let the boys have their fun without interference.

BLOT ON CITY

"We know that Carnegie Tech had nothing to do with the 1928 fiasco and we feel this year that it regrets the repetition of the unpleasant scenes of two years ago.

"The fact is, however, that the impression received by several thousand New York University followers from two trips to Pittsburgh is not likely to redound to the credit of that city. We are bringing the matter up at this time in the fervent hope that when N. Y. U. plays in Pittsburgh in 1932 somebody in authority may be able to arrange the policing on such a basis that New York University men and women, students and alumni alike, will be received as law-abiding guests and not as law-breaking intruders.

WESTINGHOUSE TEAM WINS

SCHENLEY TOPS FIFTH AVENUE; LANGLEY COPS

City League warfare waxed keen yesterday as Westinghouse, Schenley, Carrick and Langley high schools copped their games. Peabody, Fifth Avenue, Perry and Allegheny were on the short ends of the scores.

BAKERS COP

Westinghouse High won the honors of Section 1 of the City League in a grueling battle with the snappy Peabody eleven. The score was 19 to 7.

In some respects the champs of their section were outplayed by Peabody, but Showboat Wares turned in a couple of big specialty acts that put Westinghouse over in a big way.

The biggest star of the game was the smallest boy in the battle. Quarterback Howard (Howdy) Levey of the Peabody club made a big name in the scholastic football world by his individual brilliance and his team-play faculties. The fleet little fellow proved as tough as whalebone and his judgment in picking holes was a reminder of Tom Davies and some of the other big-time boys. If Howdy puts on 10 or 15 pounds he will not have to bow to any of the present crop of collegiate stars.

Levey's dashing drives around end and through the tackles had much to do with the touchdown which he eventually made. The quarterback knifed his way over the goal line for the only touchdown made by his team.

WARE SCORES

When the teams left the field at the end of the first half, the invaders were out in front by a single point. Showboat carried the ball over for the first touchdown of the game when he smeared the line for a gain that was just sufficient to record the score. The try for point missed fire.

The Peabody boys came back with a lot of dash and throughout the second quarter they outplayed their classy foemen. The visitors made their try for point on top of Levey's touchdown, and the Peabody cheering section was in an uproar. These rooters had a great time until the third quarter, when Ware let fly with a remarkable forward pass to Wadsworth, who stepped over the line after catching the 50-yard shot. It was a sparkling play, especially on the part of Showboat. The try for point was successful.

FIELD TALLIES

Peabody was threatening Westinghouse in the fourth period when it fumbled inside its own territory. Showboat and his gang went to work with a vengeance, and after a hard drive Field plunged over with a third touchdown. The kick was missed. The lineup:

games. He stated that he had been assured by Dr. Charles E. Beury, president of Temple University, that the Temple team would contribute its share of the proceeds of the game with Lehigh University to the destitute of this city.

Other games proposed by Mayor Mackey would bring together Temple and Villanova and the University of Pennsylvania and the University of Alabama.

The Mayor's telegram to President Hoover read:

"Due to the fact that Philadelphia can provide in its Municipal Stadium at least 40,000 more seats than any stadium in the East and because the unemployment situation is more acute in New York and Philadelphia than any cities on the Eastern seaboard, I respectfully submit to you the proposal that if the Army and Navy game can be played in Philadelphia for the benefit of the destitute, this city would like to divide the proceeds with New York for the aid of those who are in dire straits in both cities."

HOOVER SPEAKS OVER HEINZ RADIO HOOKUP TONIGHT

The Loudspeaker

Comedy Rollcall.
Cigaret War on Air.
Wells Not So Good.

By LOUIS REID

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—Not many of the monologists and comedians are missing from the radio rollcall today, though we have yet to hear those gifted gents, Ed Wynn, Bobby Clark, Jimmy Durante and Walter Catlett.

Louis Reid

Of the four Wynn, it seems to me, has a style best adapted to the microphones. His unique sense of comedy, with its vivid overtone of pathos, his gift for pertinent observation, his inimitable and ever-disarming chuckle would be something new to the armchairs. Wonder why the broadcasters have not tracked him down?

Wynn's price may come too high, but the broadcasters have been willing to unstrap their wallets for other comedians, Weber and Fields, Willie Howard, Joe Cook, Eddie Cantor.

Radio would welcome Wynn as it would welcome Durante and his comic song, "So I Ups to Him." Clark's drollery and Catlett's gift for gab also would appear to be suitable to the air, and it would not surprise me were they soon to be brought into the radio corral as masters of some new toothpaste ceremonies.

New Interest in "Amos 'n' Andy"

The radio world expects an armchair revival in "Amos 'n' Andy," particularly on the part of children, as a result of the blackface stars' first talkie. There is also an expectation, as a result of the success of the picture—and there is no question of its success—of more talkies by the foremost stars of the microphone. At any event, the finish of their opening film is believed to leave the Hollywood door open to them for other pictures.

The only question to be solved is whether successive talkies will not rob Amos 'n' Andy of most of their radio prestige. It will mean a concentrated cupping of their ears to the ground swells of public opinion and a concentrated study of ol' debbil psychology to find out.

The Neptunes of the air waves include the cigaret-makers in their nightly prayers. The most spirited business competition in the republic today is among the cigaret-makers, and the croupiers of the microphones as a result, are busy with their rakes.

One cigaret firm is spending, a spy reports, $6,000 weekly in broadcasting an hour, which embraces not only such costly warblers as Werrenrath and Robinson, but crooners, baby-voice singers, quartets, a whole battalion of musicians and such an occasional star of the operatic heavens as Mary Garden.

Cigaret War Rages On Radio

Another great cigaret company is not content with one hour of B. A. Rolfe's fast dance music each week. They must have three. Their weekly paycheck to the microphone mahatma runs into thousands of dollars, for Rolfe comes high. His musicians are not merely oom-pah, wah-wah jazzbos but men skilled for the most part in half a dozen different instruments. Such versatile musicians as Andy Sannella and Ross Gorman are regular members of his orchestra.

Those who hold aloft the banners of a third company closed not so long ago, a costly season of jazz as played by Dr. Whiteman and his staff. They are the first of the cigaret makers to cease attendance at the shrine of jazz and devote themselves through numerology to the airing of what the future holds for the individual.

Other cigaret men, however, show no signs of departing from their reliance upon bands, two piano teams and quartets paying tribute to the Burma girl waiting, as she has waited for 30 ear-dinning years, in Mandalay.

And now they say the Chesterfield army is camped upon the doorsteps of the broadcasters, seeking a strategic hour in which to penetrate the parlors.

Why shouldn't the radio rulers give a prayer nightly to the cigaret men, or rather to the longevity of the cigaret war? They'd be derelict in their duty if they didn't.

While anything that H. G. Wells has to say invariably holds the attention, his voice is the least suited to the microphone of any that has come out of London. So high is it pitched and so frequently does it drop into vague whispers that it is almost indistinguishable to the ear.

Negro Choirs Might Be Heard More

The broadcasters, too, might make more of the excellent choirs of Negro singers in the land. No groups in the country can sing Stephen Foster's melodies or the "spirichels" of mammyland as well as these choirs, but the broadcasters seldom, as the English professors say, give them a tumble.

We Now Present

By DARRELL V. MARTIN, Radio Editor.

All of the 57 varieties have been incorporated in the H. J. Heinz sixty-first birthday celebration tonight over KDKA. With President Hoover, Howard Heinz, Sir Henry Thornton among the principal speakers and Cyrena Van Gordon topping the list of artists, the whole thing is made complete with a round-the-world broadcast involving the most powerful stations in the United States and England, Pittsburgh, Washington and London studios are the points of origin starting at 8 o'clock. Anyone who heard Rosa Raisa sing in the Chicago Opera broadcasts last year will not fail to hear her tonight at 10:30 over KDKA in the beautifully tragic "Jewels of the Madonna." The broadcast is to include the famous waltz interzzo. Wallace Butterworth tells the story of the opera and J. Clyver Riehl is to assist him back of the scenes.

Garlands of sausages were presented the Little German Band in the Wilkinsburg High School last night.

Gus Schmalts, the leader, was signalled for special mention, after a long, glowing speech by Dr. George Norris he was presented with a pretzel two feet in diameter.

We suppose that's a new "dough" to take the place of sour notes.

Ford Bond, the Kentucky boy, made a nice job of the Cities Service program last night in the absence of Neil Enslen, who is undergoing a sinus operation.

On our calendar of things to be done we have the name of "Bunny" Weslager at Pitt, who is to be given a personal tour of the studios one of these days.

* * *

"Sunny" is just what his name implies. He pens a spiffy column, "Pitt Pourri," for the Pitt Weekly, that sets a pace for witty college writers.

For example, in this week's issue:

"Since we purchased a Ford we have been financially submerged. And confidentially, more things than the battery have been charged."

What a shock!

QUESTION A DAY:

What has become of Alois Havrilla?—H. McG., Wilkinsburg.

Answer—At WRC, Washington. You may hear him on the network quite frequently this winter.

Merle Jacobs of WTAM renown, is an orchestra leader who delights in the collegiate stuff. Big fur coat, dimpled hat and all that. We like his music.

Ralph Federer, the "Lee Sims" pianist at WCAE, is working under so many names now that he has to look at his automobile license now and then to identify himself.

Ralph has become famous for his special arrangements which are known around the studios as "Federesque." His style is so distinctive we can identify his music under any name.

* * *

For enjoyment he rattled off a modern tempo of Rachmaninoff's "Second Concerto" last night that had a studio crowd gaping.

His dad, J. C. Federer, an insurance man in Morgantown, W. Va., is very proud of his boy and listens every time he's on the air. He has a right to be proud!

TODAY'S TID BIT:

Lew White and Ted Fiorito recently made a record by remote control while situated in studios five miles apart. The actual recording took place in a third studio by land wire.

If You Are Fat At 45 Here's Good News For You

Yes: I'm forty-five today—built like a race horse, my friends say—and I know I feel 10 years younger than I did three months ago—and I'd hate to tell you how much fat I lost with Kruschen.

I call Kruschen Salts the "magic salts" because when I was fat and wretched, despondent and half sick all the time—it took only one bottle that I bought for 85 cents to liven me up—put ambition and energy into me, make me feel years younger and show me how to lose the fat I was ashamed of.

Let me advise all fat people not to fail to take one-half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water before breakfast every morning.

Every drug store worthy of the name in the world sells Kruschen Salts—an 85-cent bottle lasts 4 weeks—not much to pay for buoyant health. A West Virginia woman lost 15 pounds in 2 weeks, and has no more headaches.

RAIDS UNCOVER SLOT MACHINES

Slot machines were confiscated and one person arrested when county detectives raided two barbecue stands on Library road, Bethel Township, yesterday.

James Pasarell, alleged proprietor of the New Penn barbecue stand, was arrested when detectives found three slot machines in his establishment. He is being held for $1,000 bond pending a hearing before Alderman George J. Anderson. At the Six Busy Bees barbecue detectives confiscated three more machines, but were unable to make any arrests. A warrant has been issued for Walter W. Burh, alleged proprietor of the latter place.

"You Must Go To Church Every Sunday For Two Years!"

Esther—young and attractive bootlegger—must sit in a pew and listen to sermons for 104 Sundays instead of going to jail.

SHE was only a "slip of a thing"—young, beautiful, well dressed and living in the lap of luxury—a mystery girl, envied by many of her sex. But the unexpected happened! The discovery of a telephone number and a secret code word—then the arrest as an important member of the bootlegging industry.

Esther pleaded guilty and threw herself on the court's mercy. "You are placed on probation for a period of two years with the condition that you go to church every Sunday during that period." A dramatic sentence and a still more dramatic experience in her pew surrounded by the congregation of well-bred men and women. A strange punishment—the results of which are being watched by judges and ministers. Read the interesting details tomorrow in The American Weekly.

Bali Island, the "Lost Paradise" Unspoiled by "Civilization"

"When I landed in Bali, five years ago, I found a million natives all minding their own business, and a culture even higher than ours; natives who lived on the fat of the land; natives who were all rich or well-to-do, and happy and contented; natives who were progressing in the various arts, such as sculpture, architecture, painting and music. The natives of Bali are not Christians and are, therefore, heathen. They do not wear hats, shoes, collars, coats or even pants; they have no railroads nor trolley cars and few automobiles, radios or moving pictures. Most shocking of all, nobody works much." Something New Regarding "Man's Most Faithful Friend"

The dog has been called man's most faithful friend. Some of us prefer dogs with a pedigree, cute ears and "gay" tails—others prefer dogs with intelligence even though they are minus fashionable "points." And now scientists tell us that the mongrel "mutt" has almost a monopoly on intelligence—they say that dog breeders are doing man's most faithful friend a cruel injustice—making a beautiful but stupid animal out of a creature with almost human intelligence. A series of interesting tests have been made—examples of what can be done in producing "super dogs." They will interest you: next Sunday in The American Weekly.

JUDGE STUDIES STEEL MERGER

YOUNGSTOWN, Nov. 8.—(AP.)—The final chapter in the prolonged hearing of the injunction suit against the merger of the Youngstown Sheet and Tube Company with the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, was enacted yesterday in the court room of Judge David G. Jenkins. Bringing to a climax three weeks of final arguments Harry Crawford, member of counsel for the Cyrus S. Eaton interests who filed the suit, delivered the last plea of the plaintiffs for an order setting the merger contract which they claim was fraudulently and illegally executed.

Judge Jenkins began deliberation on the extensive volumes of evidence which required months to compile. He is not expected to render his decision for six weeks or more.

Crawford's argument consumed nearly all of the final day, and a night session of court, the first ever held in the four and a half months consumed by the trial, was necessary to complete it.

HEROIC 'LIFER' GETS PARDON

PARCHMAN, Miss., Nov. 8.—(AP.)—A convict serving a life term for murder gained his freedom by shooting and killing a Negro prisoner who in an attempt to escape menaced the life of a guard.

Jeff Atkinson, life-termer who had gained the rank of a trusty guard, shot Lewis Griffin, after the Negro and a companion had struck down a guard, taken his gun and attempted to flee.

As the Negro fired at Sergt. C. H. Corley, of the convict guard, Atkinson ordered him to throw down his gun. Griffin did not comply and Atkinson shot him down. Charles Callahan, Griffin's companion escaped.

The prison superintendent immediately informed Gov. Bilbo of Atkinson's deed and the executive ordered a pardon effective at once.

Tonight Atkinson was en route to his home in Leake County, where in 1925 he was convicted of murder.

CREW RESCUED AS SHIP BURNS

KEY WEST, Fla., Nov. 8.—(AP.)—The schooner Rose Mary, en route from Mexico to Baltimore with dye producing timber, burned 10 miles off Key West after an explosion of unreported origin.

Capt. George A. Eden, owner, and his wife, assistant navigator, were rescued with eight members of the crew, by the U. S. S. Hannibal, government survey vessel.

Capt. Eden said the Rose Mary's $10,000 cargo would be a total loss.

The vessel, he said, was putting into Key West for repairs when the explosion occurred. The crew of the Hannibal reported seeing two bursts of smoke from the schooner and hastened to assist Capt. Eden and the crew, who sought safety in a lifeboat.

DAILY TRUE STORY

'Salted'

Fern Mitchell was unusually happy.

There were so many things to make her happy this bright June day.

First of all, she was being escorted by Mr. David Whitton, the handsome and fairly successive young lawyer of Meadville.

Not that Fern had any lack of admirers, because a mighty pretty girl always has admirers, and when the mighty pretty girl is the daughter of exceedingly wealthy parents, she has many more admirers.

But with Dave Whitton it was different. Fern was in love with him.

The occasion was the opening of the Meadville Community House, an unusually pretentious place with its reading rooms, dance hall, gymnasium, auditorium and other attractions. Then there were the tennis courts outside and the playgrounds for little kids, and about everything one could desire in a community center.

The fact that this place was the gift of Colonel Thomas Mitchell, and that Colonel Mitchell was Fern's grandfather, naturally added to her pleasure.

It seemed as if the whole population was out for the ceremony held outside on the grounds.

Fern's parents were in Europe at this time. Col. Mitchell wished he was in Europe. He didn't want any "fuss and feathers" about it, but they sort of roped him into the ceremony.

Proposal

"Gramp is the dearest man in the world," Fern assured Dave.

"I was hoping that I rated—er—well, I'd like to rate like that with you?"

Fern blushed prettily.

"Tonight I'm coming over to propose—in a nice formal way," he whispered.

Fern said nothing.

"Haven't you anything to say?" he finally asked her.

"Er—well, don't be late," she whispered and then, "S-s-sh—they've started."

They listened to the introduction, oratorical, flowery, so overdone that Col. Mitchell became red and nervous.

They made plenty of fuss, with speeches. During the silence two women sitting right back of Fern and David were talking. —"and I told Joseph all you got to do is have money, no matter how you git it—then you're a celebrity," one woman said.

"Ain't it true?"

"I've heard my father tell how Tom Mitchell left here just a poor kid and how he went out West and got rich by salting mines and selling them to suckers—now look at him. You'd think he was the President or something, and—"

A blare of music drowned the rest.

Fern held her breath for a moment. Tears came to her eyes. She stole a glance at David. He was staring straight ahead.

David Calls

Fern Mitchell ceased being happy then and there. After a while, at the close of the ceremonies, she complained of the heat and wanted to go home. David took her home. He had tried to talk cheerfully, but Fern had replied only in sad-voiced monosylables.

So David Whitton came over, and after a while they went to the Colonel's den. Fern started talking at once.

She told him exactly what the two women had said.

"Reckon it's the lowest-down sort of cheating, Fern."

"Well, before Dave decides that he wants me, I want him to have the truth about it—if you were crooked and salted mines, I want David to know."

Fern has got to know what a low-down cuss her ornery old granddad used to be. Out west I hit up with Hod Pease. He was smart, with his knowledge of mines and ores. We went prospecting together and we had some tough times of it.

"When a man's hungry—" David started to say.

"I didn't quite grow hungry, I could pan enough dust to pay for my chuck. Hod was addicted to gambling and too much liquor and he never saved a cent. But we couldn't seem to strike it rich. One day Hod said he had an idea if I went over to Green Gulch and staked a claim and prospected while he prospected where we were, we'd stand a better chance. It sounded right, so I went over.

"Well, sir, Green Gulch was a wonderful place for sheep but no place for a miner. Nothing there. I came back and found Hod trying to sell our claim. He gave me a wink. He had three men there looking it over. To my surprise he was telling that he had to go back East at once to see his old mother. I knew his mother had been dead for years. When he began to show them where pay dirt was I was more surprised. One of the men said he would go back and get the cash.

"'You'll buy nothin there, gentlemen,' he said; 'the mine is salted. We'll go back and get a sheriff and have those two sharpers drummed out of the county if not locked up.'

"Now that sort of scared me. I was in as bad as Hod, being his partner. I went to Hod and told him. He jest laughed and said nothing would come of it and another sucker would come along, but he was scared and later he confessed that he had salted the place.

"'If you'll give me $50 in dust to get out I'll sell my share,' he said. I knew I could pan enough to make that up, so he sold out to me and beat it. I began to worry about being arrested, so I spent much of my time keeping one eye open."

"Eye open for what, Gramps? Suckers who weren't so wise?" Fern asked.

Dynamites Mine

"Kept on the watch for sheriff's men—I was afraid this expert meant what he threatened. And when I saw him prowling around my claim soon after this I was sure that there was trouble ahead. This expert disappeared when he saw me. That settled it. I knew that he had come to see if we were there and next time he came he'd bring trouble for me. I tried to remove the evidence of where Hod had salted the mine, but the young cuss was clever. He had shot gold into places there with a gun, to make it look imbedded and natural. I had a hunch that some dynamite would blow out all traces of the salting.

"Well sir, I drilled and drilled and jabbed in half of what dynamite I had left. That was some noise. The smoke hadn't cleared away before that expert came with some men.

"'Here's the salted mine,' he said, 'and here's one of the lads who fixed it.'

"But right then I didn't pay much attention to him. I was into the hole the dynamite made, picking the nuggets out of the mother lode I had opened. The men called that expert nine kinds of a certain fool and tried to buy me out. I didn't sell right then. I just sent for a couple of men I could trust, and started to work the place until that big syndicate man came along—you know. Hammond from the Ruggy syndicate—and when he got through investigating he offered me so much I was dizzy."

The Colonel beamed on Fern.

"So you see, it was sort of true that I left town a poor, ragged boy and that my money was the result of a salted mine—er—David, you were saying something, about wanting to marry Fern?"

"Not exactly, Colonel, I was just telling you that I am going to marry Fern," David said.

The old man got up and shook David's hand. He kissed Fern.

"I'll go and get a bottle of something," he said, "and I will be gone just 15 minutes—that's long enough for a clinch and a kiss, even an engagement kiss."

WITH CONGRESSMAN FRISBY IN DARKEST AFRICA

By HORACE WALPOLE FRISBY
"The Man With a Mission."

THERE are some things about Africa I would rather forget—in fact, I have forgotten some of the things. But I shall never forget the wives of the farmers, who seemed so eager to find out how we do things in "Frisbyland," as they soon learned to call America.

I circulated freely among the settlers, who, when they found out I was a white man, gave three cheers and asked me to stay for supper.

There was one brave little woman who caught my eye, so I was not surprised, a little later on, to find myself asking her many pertinent questions concerning the customs of Africa. And she, too, wrung many secrets from me concerning my native land. She was particularly interested in the statistics which I quoted, offhand, and she was nothing short of amazed when I explained how we make out our income tax blanks.

"You are very progressive," she said, in her native tongue.

I though this was a pretty compliment, coming from one who could not possibly have any personal, or selfish motive, for her flattery. We parted better friends than ever, and I promised to send her some clippings showing how we do things in a big way over where I come from. I never think of Africa without thinking of this little woman, so misunderstood by her own husband, who is a big bum, who spends much of his time drawing wrong conclusions and making insinuations which he had better be prepared to prove the next time I go to Africa, which if I never go will be soon enough.

Stupid

It has been now nearly two months since the French government requested William Randolph Hearst, American publisher, to leave France. And as time goes on and the more we think about that action, the more we think it was a tremendous blunder on the part of the French government, a blunder that will be far-reaching in its effects and detrimental to France. Mr. Hearst is one of the most influential men in the United States. It is a fair statement to make that he, through the medium of his chain of newspapers and other publications, has more influence on the American mind than any other one man. He can be a wonderful friend and a weighty enemy. The minds of the people of America are very much influenced by the daily newspapers and other periodicals, and these minds could be made friendly to France if Mr. Hearst was France's friend. But it is really expecting too much of human nature to expect Mr. Hearst to be a friend of the nation that went to the extreme of ordering him out of the country. Such action on the part of France must necessarily be a great blow to any man so involved.

Mr. Hearst is a leading influential American citizen. America has always been France's friend. As a great American citizen, Mr. Hearst is entitled to every courtesy and friendly action that France could show him. France needs all the friends she can get. Every nation needs all the friends she can get. France is a state in a continent that has in the past been frequently upset by much internal discord and there is no reason to suppose that in the future Europe will not be the scene of warfare and political ferment. At the moment France is the object of the jealousy of every other European nation, and just to what extent that jealousy will sway these other nations in their attitude toward France is a question.

And after all, why should France expel Mr. Hearst? Simply because, following the methods of all newspapers in seeking to get all the news possible, he gave to the world the conditions of a secret naval treaty England and France were attempting to put into effect, which treaty was really being negotiated in an underhanded fashion by two nations who were pretending to join in another open agreement covering the same ground between all the nations which were then seeking to develop a peace pact that would include all nations.

By giving this information to the world, Mr. Hearst did a good deed because the publicity prevented the secret treaty being put into effect. France was caught with the goods, and Mr. Hearst caught her. Of course, France can expel anybody she wants to from her borders, but if the French expel many Americans who have the influence Mr. Hearst has, I am afraid they will be very, very sorry. We can see only one way out for France, and that is for the nation to make an abject apology to Mr. Hearst, and to send the official responsible for that attack on Mr. Hearst to perpetual political oblivion.

Three REAL Faces

Age Has Not Destroyed Them.

LORD GREY, LORD READING AND GENERAL DAWES.

These three faces belong to three men that have done something. They interest you because they actually have retained their SHAPE and their human appearance.

Ordinarily, men start out with faces full of life, youth and enthusiasm, and end up looking very much like one another—expression gone, faces dull.

These faces are unusual because they have retained up close to the three-score-and-ten period the life and light that were in them originally.

The face of Lord Reading, who has been Viceroy of India, is particularly interesting.

Age does not wither him nor kill the youth in his face. And being a Jew, whose people have been thinking hard for 2,000 years, he might be excused if he were a little tired by this time.

Lord Grey of Falloden, a brilliant and distinguished Englishman, and Gen. Dawes, our Ambassador to Great Britain, are men that have worked hard, retaining youth in their faces.

Studying the biographies of these men, it is interesting to compare their portraits in old age with their youthful portraits. Usually, each year means deterioration. But a really great face becomes more youthful, more full of life and light as years pass.

Making Employes Happy

Heinz Company Policy Gets Results—Other Pittsburgh Items Briefly Discussed.

The new auditorium and recreation building of the H. J. Heinz Company, which is being dedicated today, stands as a monument to 61 years of friendly relationship between the company and its employes. The event, therefore, has a significance far more profound than appears on the surface. Every large employer of labor may well envy such a record. It would redound to the benefit of the public as well, if all corporations were as successful as the Heinz Company in keeping their help happy and loyal.

The founder of the Heinz Company had rare vision in perceiving, at a time when most companies were blind to the fact, that it is profitable to look after the welfare of employes. More than 30 years ago he gave the Heinz employes a building equipped with stage, pipe organ and other suitable equipment, in which they might hold meetings and entertainments. The new building is a much larger and finer edifice, but the spirit that prompted it is unchanged.

President Hoover and many other notable persons are sending well-deserved felicitations to the H. J. Heinz Company today. The people of Pittsburgh congratulate the company no less cordially.

Justifiable opposition has developed in relation to the vacation of streets agreed upon by the city to permit the erection of the new Pennsylvania passenger terminal. It grows out of the abandonment of the "Z" plan for traffic—a grade separation scheme—in favor of the "T" plan, insisted upon by the Pennsylvania, despite the fact that it was held to be inadequate by traffic experts, and accepted by the city as a makeshift to save a comparatively few dollars.

Through its pennywise policy the railroad com- pany now finds it will have to fight utilities companies objecting to vacating streets and creating a traffic problem the plan adopted cannot cope with. They threaten damage suits which might cost the company and the city all or more than is saved in the adoption of the undesirable "T" plan. All concerned should confer and come to an amicable and sensible agreement, so that this great improvement may proceed.

The American Radiator Company has just bought 50,000 tons of pig iron. This follows the dullest month the iron makers have had in many years. The company has a reputation for invariably picking the low point in the pig iron market for making its purchases. An order of this exceptional size from American Radiator is usually an indication that a turn in business is at hand.

Cold weather has brought its problems to autoists. A cheering message comes from Chief Engineer Samuel Eckels, of the State Highway Department. He promises that 10,000 miles of road will be kept free of snow and treated for slippery conditions this winter. That is 120 miles more than last year. No less important than the assurance thus given that there will be less interference by cold weather with traffic is the outlook for decrease in accidents due to skidding.

The Better Traffic Committee reports that the traffic toll of death among children is being held below the rate of last year, but that adults continue to be unmindful of their own safety. Educational propaganda saves the kiddies, but adult folly is above acceptance of advice. Hence traffic fatalities of the recent October were 20, as against 11 last year, although the count was held to zero in one week—Safety Congress week.

SIR WILLIAM RAMSAY

By Archibald Henderson

Some of the most impressive and spectacular discoveries in the light of modern science are associated with the name of Sir William Ramsay. He once more brought to the fore the ages-old problem of the transmutation of metals.

One of the gases upon which the future of airship development and progress depend is helium gas, of which there are almost unlimited supplies in this country. One of his discoveries was of helium gas on the earth, which will cause his name long to be remembered, not only in the history of chemistry, but also in the history of aviation in lighter-than-air machines, which has only just begun.

William Ramsay, born in Glasgow on October 2, 1852, received his education at the university of his native city. He afterwards took his degree of doctor of philosophy at the University of Tuebingen, Germany, and became a member of the chemistry staff at his alma mater of Glasgow University.

In 1880, he was appointed professor of chemistry at the University College, Bristol, and soon afterwards his executive and organizing ability caused his election to the post of principal. Some years later he was elected professor of chemistry at University College, London. In 1913 he retired with the rank of professor emeritus.

One of the momentous discoveries of modern science for which the spectroscope is responsible, may certainly be ranked the discovery of helium by the British astronomer, Sir Norman Lockyer, in 1863. It was a new element, the fine yellow line close to the codium lines being found in no other known substance. To this element he gave the name helium, the sun element, from the Greek word for sun, helios.

In 1895, while two young scientists of Cambridge and Oxford, Ernest Rutherford and Frederick Soddy, were studying the fascinating new subject of radioactivity, at Montreal, they made certain discoveries which prompted them to predict that one of the products of decomposition of the emanation from radium salts would prove to be helium. On the invitation of Ramsay, Soddy went to London to work with him. As stated in The Book of Popular Science:

"The two experimenters dissolved some radium in water, and by a very ingenious device collected and purified the luminous gas that rose above the water, then examined it by means of the spectroscope. After the gas had collected for two days, it was examined, and the spectrum of helium was observed. Ten days afterwards the evolution of helium atoms from radium atoms was so far advanced that the material into which the luminous gas had changed was collected. So that the idea of the transmutation of the elements, found in the days when mankind was ignorant of the existence of the true elements, was at last proved to be an actual fact."

In 1734, Henry Cavendish in seeking to determine the exact nature of the gas left over after he had caused all the oxygen in the atmosphere to unite with hydrogen to form water, found that about one one-hundred and twentieth was not nitrogen.

In 1893 Lord Rayleigh, with whom William Ramsay was associated, discovered a new gaseous element which they christened argon, "the lazy one," because it could not be induced to combine with any other element. Two years later, while studying argon, he heated the mineral cleveite in a furnace, and produced a remarkable spectrum. This spectrum showed the spectral line of helium—thus proving that an element, early discovered to exist in the sun, was also found millions of miles away from the sun, namely on the earth. In 1898, by treating argon in an elaborate way, Ramsay and Travers discovered three new gasses: neon, krypton, and xenon. The discovery of these rare gases, which constitute almost 1 per cent of the atmosphere, has been termed one of the most remarkable achievements in modern science.

William Ramsay, a great chemist, was knighted in 1902, received the Nobel prize for chemistry in 1904, and died July 23, 1916.

LISTEN, WORLD -:-

By Elsie Robinson

I would much rather have an unfaithful husband than a mean, stingy one. And I'd prefer a good-natured wantom any day to a greedy, grouchy wife. For I do believe that warm-hearted sinners do much less harm in the world than snooty saints.

That philandering husband, for instance. I admit he's a renegade when he deserts his home. But does he, after all, harm the home as much as the old meanie who sits around and makes it a hell on earth? Who's the greater enemy of society—the man who's happy in the wrong place or the gent who isn't happy any place?

And the Bad Girl—mind you, I'm not indorsing bad girls, nor do I harbor any sentimental illusions about 'em. But I'd like to remind certain femmes that Sour Sanctity is as far removed from real goodness as Dashing Depravity. For, what's the use of virtue if all it seems to buy you is a pain in the neck?

The great thing in life is not to live safely, smugly, sanctimoniously. The great thing in life is TO LIVE. There is nothing particularly commendable in staying out of jail, keeping out of debt, never being talked about. Sometimes such achievements are proof of a virile spirit. Frequently, however, they're merely the result of playing safe. Which is a million miles from righteousness. For the essence of righteousness is action

Do something—even if you do wrong! Don't sit back and pin halos on yourself, just because you're afraid to take a chance!

TO LOVE—that's the great virtue. To live graciously, generously, gaily, gallantly! To live so richly and bravely that you warm and quicken life for all other men. To live so gladly that you make other men desire life!

I'm thinking of two quotations. A dying man wrote one of them. Yet even approaching death could not strangle the brave laughter in Robert Louis Stevenson's soul.

"Gentleness and cheerfulness, these come before all morality; they are the perfect duties," he cried. "If your morals make you dreary, depend upon it they are wrong. I do not say 'give them up,' for they may be all you have—but conceal them like a vice, lest they should spoil the lives of better and simpler people."

And this other, from A. S. M. Hutchinson's fine book, "The Uncertain Trumpet": "My gospel . . . is simply that the sins of the flesh, evil as they are, abominable as they can be, are as nothing compared with the sins of the spirit, with meanness, with selfishness, with bitterness, with envy, hatred, malice and all uncharitableness."

And if those two quotations don't put a dent in your complacency, you're a smugger man than I am, Gunga Din!

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

The Way of Peace

Just to live life gladly
Like the little things
Creeping through the grasses,
Soaring on bright wings!
Just to go, forgetting
Weight of days gone by,
Letting no tomorrow
Shade this cloudless sky!
This is wisdom, truly,
This the way of peace,
Where from bonds and burdens
Men may gain release,
Finding golden sunlight
Richer than Earth's gold,
Spilling rarer treasures
Than Earth's coffers hold.
Just to live life gayly,
With no questioning,
Lightly as the linnet
Lives an hour of Spring!

Text for Today

Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven.—Matthew, v:16.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—For three months a very British attache of a riding academy has been teasing me to become a pupil. I held my temper over his insinuations my liver needed a shaking up and so many feared to ride on account of the handicap of age.

But his sneer, "The very best people invariably ride!" got me. You'd think I live across the tracks in the hollow so I told him to bring on his mustang and added testily I desired a mount that was spirited. Nobody can goad me!

As a matter of fact I was brought up in the saddle. It was only a muckledun colored pony with the heaves, but it had its moments. There is an old saying on the range that one who has learned to swim or ride a horse never forgets either. And that—lie that it is—was comforting.

So I scrambled out at daylight, the morning sky chiffoned in pink, tra, la, for the first lesson and in my butter-bean shaped riding pants and blue flannel shirt taxied to the academy. The mount was a mare named Julia and as she frisked out of the stall her glance was not particularly affectionate.

A groom they called 'Erbert led her to a mounting block which was circled by a group of grinning hostlers. I tried to nuzzle my face against Julia's—you know, the old horseman—but she would have none of me, jerked her head away and began pawing at the ground.

There was nothing to do but straddle her. The instructor suggested I let her have her head. He was the sort you see at the hunts who ride hell-for-leather and cry "Heigh, ho, the fox!" without batting an eyelash. After cantering a short space along he observed: "A little forward. You are doing fine."

But something got into Julia My reply was something like this: "I—glub, glub—haven't been on—whoa, Julia!—the back of a—glubbity, glub, glub—horse for more than—nice Julia!—twenty years. This saddle—orkity-ork—is a little—For God's sake stop her!"

As I flashed under one of the bridges spanning the bridle path of Central Park I heard a roughneck on his way to work call out: "Old Tom Mix in person!"

* * *

Every now and then Julia, the hussy, would twist her neck around to see if I happened to be still there, and indulge in a fresh spurt. Once I caught a glimpse of the instructor who was by my side placidly enough, gazing casually here and there at the beauties of the early morning. He seemed totally unconscious his pupil was on a runaway wild horse. As I would go up in the air it didn't appear so bad, but when I came down—O, baby!

There is a saying none is so calm as one flirting with disaster. In all the hoopla the strangest thoughts raced through what I facetitiously call my brain. I thought of good old Guy Campbell and how his bridgework held up under terrific strain. Flashing by the tall Egyptian obelisk I wondered if H. T. Webster was still smoking that pipe that would gag a buzzard. There was what was left of the Hotel Majestic—a hole in the ground! And Copeland Townsend, a rare soul, gathered to his fathers. There was deserted Columbus Circle and perhaps my last view of it. And on and on we thundered in a thud of flying hoofs, Julia, the soandso and I. And that damned snippet of an instructor.

Once in rounding the turn near the Plaza—for the 118th time I think—I even smiled wanly. It was over a remark of my wife's, poor soul nearing widowhood. At dinner last night I called her attention to a fashion article that finger-nails were being blackened. She replied: "You have been partly in style all your life." If she could just see her chalk white husband now, she'd regret that crack!

* * *

I really don't know what happened to Julia, unless she just wore herself out, but her mad gallop slowed down to a trot. And I sit on a trot even worse than a gallop. But I finally brought her to a full stop in a lather of steaming foam. "Quite a canter!" remarked old fuzzy-wuzzy, but I quit speaking to him long ago.

And if I get through the next three or four days without breaking in two, look out for a swell puff for Paul Revere. There was a boy!

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

Among those of your class socially and financially you may have reached a prominent place in your community.

But you have become dissatisfied and want to climb higher.

You think you are capable of a higher plane of living, of a more responsible and looked-up-to-position.

If you have worked up to your present place and remained there for quite a time, very likely you have topped the summit, so far as your ability is concerned.

Each step ahead finds you with a higher class and more difficult competition in every way.

Much of the financial and social distress and disappointment which is met is the result of aspiring to that for which there is no fitness.

Were you happy?

You were not tolerated upon equal terms so you did not enjoy yourself.

You were out of your element and did not possess the qualifications to keep up and do your share without hardship.

You will be happier and most successful in the place in which you belong.
